THE ATHLETIC TEN FOR '71.

WINNERS OF THE PROFESSIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP.

We present this week an engraving of the winners of the base ball championship of the United States, and in this connection we propose to give brief biographical sketches of the players. The champion ten of the Athletic Club for 1871 include Malone, McBride, Fisler, Reach, Meyerle, Radcliff, Cuthbert, Sensenderfer, Huebell and Bechtel. We give them in the order of their positions on the field:—

Fergus G. Malone made his début with the Athletics on the 31st of Oct., 1863, as short stop, and during the seasons of 1863 and 1864 he played second base. In the latter part of the season of 1863 he tried his hand at pitching, filling the position left vacant by the resignation of Tom Pratt. In 1865 Malone played with the Keystones, of Philadelphia, and in 1866 we find him playing with the Diamond State Club, of Wilmington, Delaware. Malone returned to Philadelphia in 1867, and during that season played first base for the Quaker City Club. During the seasons of 1868 and 1869 Malone was in Washington, playing with the Olympics, of that city, in the position of catcher. In the commencement of the season of 1870 Malone rejoined the Athletics and played in the position of catcher. Malone was born in Philadelphia, weighs 156lbs, is 5ft. 8in. in height, and is 28 years of age.

John Dickson McBride, prior to joining the Athletics, was one of the best cricketers of Philadelphia, and his excellent fielding induced Col. Moore to give him a position on the Athletic nine, and on the 28th of June, 1861, "Dick" made his first appearance, and played left field and short stop for a couple of seasons. He made his début as a pitcher in a game with the Mutuals, at Hoboken, N. J., on the 16th of June, 1863, and regularly assumed that position in the commencement of the season of 1864, playing there ever since, except a short time during 1869, when he played short stop. Dick has been, for the past five seasons, the captain of the nine, and he will still hold that position. He is 5ft. 8in. in height, weighs 145lbs, and is 26 years old —born in Philadelphia.

Weston D. Fisler made his début as a base ball player with the Equity, of Philadelphia, on the 28th of June, 1860, and in the same year he acted as catcher of the picked nine of Philadelphia in their game with the Excelsiors, of Brooklyn. Fisler afterwards played with the Olympics and Adriatics, of Philadelphia, up to 1864, when he joined the Camden Club, of Camden, N. J., and played with them during the season of 1864 and 1865. Fisler also played as catcher in three games with the Eckfords, of Brooklyn, during the latter part of the season of 1864. On the 9th of June, 1866, Fisler made his first appearance on the Athletic's nine, and has played with that club ever since, taking the positions of centre field and third base until Berkenstock retired, at the close of the season of 1867. He was born in Camden, N. J., 28 years ago, weighs 157lbs, and stands 5ft. 6in. in height.

Alfred J. Reach first played as catcher of the Jacksons, a junior club of Brooklyn, N. Y., during the seasons of 1858-'59 and 1860. In 1861 Al. Reach played with the Eckfords, and remained with them until the close of the season of 1864. While with the Eckfords, his positions on the nine were third base and first base. Al. Reach removed to Philadelphia in 1864, playing one game on the nine of the Athletics on the 9th of June of that year. In 1865 Reach was regularly installed as second base of the Athletics, and has filled that position ever since. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., is 31 years of age, stands 5ft. 6in. in height, and weighs 145lbs.

Levi S. Meyerle played with the Harry Clay Club, of Philadelphia, in 1867 and 1868, joining the Geary Club in the latter part of 1868, and generally played as pitcher. On the 24th of April, 1869, Meyerle made his first appearance on the nine of the Athletics, and played that season in various positions—catcher, pitcher, third base and right field. In 1870 Meyerle played with the White Stockings, of Chicago, as pitcher and third base man. At the commencement of the season of 1871 Meyerle rejoined the Athletics and played third base. Meyerle was born in Philadelphia, is 23 years old, weighs 177 lbs and is 6ft. 1in. in height.

John Radcliff gained his first experience as a ball player with the Camden and Union clubs, of Camden, N. J., during the season of 1866, generally playing catcher; his play in that position led to his enlistment in the Athletic's ranks, and he made his debut with that club on the 13th of June, 1867. During the seasons of 1867, '68 and '69, Radcliff caught for the Athletics. In 1870 he filled the position of short stop. Radcliff was born in Camden, N. J., weighs 140lbs, is 5ft. 6in. in height, and is 25 years old.

Edgar E. Cuthbert first played with the Keystones, of Philadelphia, during the seasons of 1865 '66, filling every position on their nine except pitcher. In the latter part of the season of 1867 he played as catcher with the West Philadelphia Club, and made his debut on the Athletic's nine on the 17th of August of that year, and played right field during the balance of that season. In 1868 and 1869 he played left field for the Athletics, and in 1870 he played centre field with the Chicago Club. Cuthbert rejoined the Athletics in 1871, and played left field. Born in Philadelphia, weighs 140lbs, is 5ft. 6in. in height, and 24 years old.

John F. J. Sensenderfer first played with the Actives and Athletics—two junior clubs—during the seasons of 1863, 1864 and 1865, filling the catcher's position. In the latter part of the season of 1865 he joined the Olympics, of Philadelphia, and played with them until the 9th of August, 1867, when he made his first appearance with the Athletics, and has played on their nine ever since, in the out field, filling the position of centre field during the last three seasons. Born in Philadelphia 24 years ago, is 5ft. 9in. in height, and weighs 170lbs.

George A. Heubel first played with the Nationals, of Philadelphia, in 1866, as first baseman and left field, filling the same positions with the Quaker City Club during 1867, and the Geary during 1868. In 1869 he played several games with the Athletics in the out-field, making his first appearance with that club on the 24th of April in that year. In 1870 he played left field for the Forest City Club, of Cleveland. In 1871 Heubel returned to Philadelphia and played right field for the Athletics. Born in Paterson, N. J., 23 years old, weighs 178lbs, height 5ft. 11½in.

George Bechtel, first played with the Geary and West Philadelphia clubs, of Philadelphia, during the seasons of 1868, 1867 and 1866, filling the position of pitcher in a majority of games. In 1869 he pitched for the Keystones. On the 25th of April, 1870, he made his first appearance with the Athletics, and filled the position of left field during that season. In 1871 Bechtel acted as tenth man. Born in Philadelphia, 23 years old, weighs 165 lbs, and is 5ft. 11in. in height.

SPORTING IN THE SPRAY.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY DR. PIERRE BLANC.

At Long Branch, one fine afternoon,
My heart was light and gay,
For I saw a sight, of an angel bright,
A sporting in the spray;
A crimson flush o'erspread her cheek,
But soon it died away,
'Twas not with fear, for I was near,
A sporting in the spray.

Then we talked, and laughed, and sung,
And frolicked in our play,
All cares behind, we'd hide and find,
Amidst the dashing spray;
But soon a cloud o'erspread the sky,
And hid the sun away,
Ah! cruel rain, why come again,
And force us from our play.

It answered not save by a drop,
Which fell upon our way,
A moment there, an emblem fair,
Had vanished 'mong the spray;
How near 'twas like our childhood's joys,
How soon they fade away!
One moment here, they disappear,
Among the world's rough spray.

Then, as we walked along life's way,
Our hearts were light and gay;
The rain may fall, and brighten all,
And mingle with the spray;
And now I'll tell you what's to be,
At no great distant day,
Soon by my side there'll be a bride,
That loves the dashing spray.

When we were one we knelt and prayed,
And blest that happy day;
We'll ne'er forget, when first we met,
A sporting in the spray;
Now years and years have o'er us flown,
Upon their distant way;
Still in my dream, down life's swift stream,
We're sporting in the spray.

A LILY AND A ROSE;

OR,

THE SCHEMER AND HIS VICTIMS.

CHAPTER XLII.
THE NAMELESS GRAVE.

Mr. Raymond Garton had amused himself while at Narin by making the acquaintance of Monsieur le Pere, the stout, good natured priest, who had spent his life in the little village, administering to the spiritual wants and necessities of his obedient flock. He was a fatherly, benevolent member of the church, fond of the people, lender of his sunny home and fonder still of a little gossip. An Englishman, with whom he could prattle in his innocent way about the little affairs of his puny diocese, and from whom he could glean the outlines of news from the great world far away, was a perfect godsend to him, and he regarded Raymond Garton with feelings almost of affection, for Raymond Garton doled out all the events, chatter of the clubs and scandals of the drawing-rooms with pleasing liberality, and the father detailed with garrulous particularity the occurrence of the last twelve months at Narin; of course he mentioned the death of the lady of whom Adolphe spoke to St. Aubyn, and Raymond, who seemed specially interested in the pathetic little story, was particular in his inquiries as to the name and former history of the poor English lady, who lay amongst the flowers in the little Narin churchyard. He was surprised, indeed he seemed startled, when the father told him that she bore no name, and that the little gravestone was plain and speechless, save for the Latin cross the villagers had reverently caused to be carved thereon.

For a moment the pleasant-spoken Englishman was lost in a reverie, shading his eyes with his white hands; then in a reverie, shading his eyes with his white hands; then he had looked up gravely, inquired minutely into every circumstance of the girl's death, and when the father had told all he knew, which was very little, for the girl had been nameless from the first, and, on the day of her death, the nurse who had been with her had left Narin, England in the last stage of consumption, and, as you are aware, died here. She kept her name and identity a close secret, as you also know, and until now there was no clue. Her friends are personal. I may say dear friends of mine," continued Raymond, gravely, and "I wish to show my respect for the dear girl in the only way I now can, that is by having the blank stone inscribed, without loss of time, with her name."

"A most thoughtful and considerate resolve!" exclaimed the priest, with simple commendation.

"It is the least I can do," replied Raymond, thoughtfully. "Stay, there is one thing more, though," he continued. "It would be some little consolation to her friends to know all the particulars of her death and to possess any articles of clothing or trinkets that she may have worn, and which they will regard as mournful relics. If you have charge of any little thing of hers, say a locket or a brooch——"

"There are a few things—a few things—a piece of ribbon and a trinket or two," replied the priest. "They shall be given to you immediately, Monsieur."

"Thank you, thank you," said Raymond. "Rely upon it, reverend sir, that her friends, who are not without influence, shall not remain in ignorance of your kindness to their poor Lilian."

"I beg you will not mention my humble efforts to cheer the poor girl's dying hours," answered the good priest, eagerly. "Remember sir, that we desire to let our good deeds ascend to heaven, and not spread themselves over the earth." And he looked up devoutly to the blue sky.

A sneer curled the lip of the man beside him; he could not understand this simple, childlike piety. It was a sealed book to him, and excited merely his pity and contempt. He rose to take his departure.

"It shall be as you wish," he said gravely. "By the way, it would be as well if you gave me the certificate of her death and burial; you have it, I suppose? I will convey it to England and place it in her friends' hands."

"Certainly, monsieur," said the priest. "It is all drawn up, and awaits only the name and that I will fill in and the date."

"Ah!" said Raymond, sharply, as if struck by some unpleasant idea, "the date! Ah, yes, of course. Perhaps it would be as well to omit the date on the tombstone?" he said, interrogatively.

"That is as monsieur wishes," replied the priest.

Raymond looked thoughtful.

"The year alone would perhaps be best," he said, as indifferently as the subject allowed. "I might as well save you all trouble by going to the mason myself," he suggested.

"Monsieur is very considerate," said the priest, walking towards the gate and pointing to a little cottage half buried amongst the churchyard trees, "that is Jacques, the mason's cottage, there, beside the church. We can see the white stones shining here and there in the sun. If monsieur will follow the winding path it will lead him to the door," and with a smile the good father, with a murmured Pax vobiscum ambled back to his little retreat, and Raymond, lifting his hat, wended his way to Jacques, the mason.

CHAPTER XLIII.
AT WORK.

A great change had come over Leonard; the episode of the wedding ring had stirred up every inch of his manhood and dignity. After crushing the little circlet of gold beneath his heel, he turned sternly to Joseph, desired him never to mention Lillian's name to him again and then limped down to the cab, Joseph following with frightened face and troubled eyes. From that day Leonard Grantley recovered rapidly in health, but his spirits which had once lent so great a charm to his manners and bearing, seemed entirely to have disappeared. His face wore always a stern and moody look, and he seemed to have aged ten years since the fatal ball. As soon as he was sufficiently recovered, he announced to Joseph Bolton his intention to return to Walner street at once, and resume his long neglected work. Against this resolve Joseph Bolton battled long and persistently, but with little avail; to all his remonstrances Leonard had one answer:—

"Joseph, I am well enough, indeed I am growing stronger day by day. I owe large sums of money—every pound lays heavily on my conscience, especially the large amount your noble-hearted generosity placed at my disposal; I have my livelihood to get, and I have to redeem the promises made to the public. Every moment I keep from my easel is one of impatience and anxiety for me, therefore say no more, I must return, and at once."

And he would sink into a chair and gaze moodily with clouded brow into the dim futurity that had nothing but a life of joyless hard work in store for him.

For the time Joseph dropped his opposition, but in a few days he came to Leonard's easle, where he was sitting sketching a small cottage in pencil, preparatory to lining it in full upon canvass, and coughing, rather nervously, said:—

"Leonard, I have let the Walner street rooms."

Leonard looked up with grave surprise—

"Let the Walner street rooms? What do you mean?"

"That I have let them to a French baron, who was anxious to have them last season, and that I have taken rooms for you in a pretty little cottage at Witton, on the banks of the Thames, and—and—now don't look so angry, Leonard, I did it all for the best, the easel and things are going down there to day."

Leonard got up and paced the room as was his won't lately when thinking deeply.

"At Witton, where is it?" he said quietly.

Joseph brightened up, he had expected a burst of indignation and anger.

"A most charming place, my dear Leonard; I'm no artist, you know, and can only buy pictures, not paint 'em, but I declare to you that the beauty of the place made me feel like you artists say you do when you see anything particularly lovely. It's the most beautiful little place in creation. The river runs through the village, just a little red brick, grey stoned place, with a little inn reflected in the water, and an old church rookhaunted and ivy-grown. There are some beautiful nooks and corners, old trees and hedge-lined lanes and—and—in fact, my dear Leonard, the place is so beautiful that I can't describe it. But you will be able to paint it, which is more to the purpose."

Leonard said nothing in reply, so Joseph, taking silence for consent, made all arrangements, and in a few days Leonard and he started for Witton. Leonard was stern and pre-occupied as usual on the way, but said one or two words in praise of the scenery as they rolled along in a hired fly, and when they stopped before a little flower-covered cottage, for all the world like a painter's ideal, he exclaimed:—

"Joseph, is this where we stay?"

And on Joseph's nodding with a smile, he said:—

"My friend, you are indeed a friend this is beautiful!"

A buxom dame came to the door to meet them, followed by a young woman, whose prettiness was not marred by her exceedingly pale face.

"Are you Mrs. Wooley?" inquired Bolton, in his hesitating way.

"Yes, sir, I'm Wooley Bob's missus," was the reply.

"Then here is your lodger," said Bolton, indicating Leonard. "This is Mr. Grantley."

"We'll make him comfortable, sir," said Mrs. Wooley Bob, and with such evident sincerity that Leonard smiled once more as he entered the passage of his new home. He found beside his bed room a commodious studio in which his easel had been already set up, and round whose walls hung the rough studies and suits of armor. The lay figure was in the corner and his much prized cabinet stood in the niche. He looked round with a greatly pleased air, and then said quietly:—

"And now for work."

CHAPTER XLIV.
A RETROSPECT.

Although the marriage was intended by Leonard to be a close secret, it cropped out in some unknown way and the world was soon praising about it. It created the greatest astonishment everywhere and at first the news was received with positive unbelief, but after the solicitors to the estate had written to Leonard Grantley requiring a denial of the rumor or a copy of the certificate of marriage, and received the latter, the world was fain to believe, and created of the affair the usual nine days' wonder. The solicitors, after proving the marriage, wrote again to Leonard requesting to be informed at what time they should wait upon him, as they had several important matters to communicate and were anxious to see him. This letter Leonard handed to Joseph, saying:—

"Will you serve me in this as you have done before? I will have nothing more to do with the woman who has so heartlessly deserted me. Write and tell them so, and inform them, as plainly as words can say it, that I will not touch one penny of her money, and that I will hold no further communication with them whatever."

The staidness of his manner left Bolton no reply, and he wrote to the solicitors as Leonard wished and so closed the correspondence. For his part Joseph was heartily glad that Leonard had determined to ignore all claims he might have on Lillian's property, and would have been perfectly satisfied with the course things had taken if Leonard would but have looked more cheerful. It is true, he never mentioned the past nor alluded to it in the slightest, and was always soft spoken and kindly in his treatment of Joseph, showing his gratitude in a hundred nameless ways, and treating him as the friend he indeed was; but Joseph could see that the young artist was not happy. He was constantly preoccupied and wrapped in thought, rarely smiled, and worked from dawn till dusk at his easel.

Ambition he seemed to have lost, he worked at faces and figures, landscapes and sea scenes with the same drudgery, and Joseph Bolton, who but a short time before used all his simple arts to entice him to his easel, now employed them to draw him away, but only partially succeeded, for Leonard would sometimes comply with his request, and fling himself down beside the stream silently and wearily, but more often he would say:—

"Let me alone, Joseph, this work does me good, there is a weight upon my shoulder which weighs heavily, I am lightening it every time I touch the canvas, let me go on until, like Pilgrim, I can cast it off altogether."

"But," Joseph would reply, "my dear Leonard, your debts are decreasing rapidly, why work so hard when everything is so safe? There is such a thing as killing the goose that lays the golden eggs, you know," and he would blow his nose on the old red silk handkerchief nervously. One day, in answer to his remonstrances on the golden egg score, Leonard laid down his brush and bared his arm. "That does not look like killing, Joseph," he said, flinching grimly at the knotted muscles and strength denoting sinews, and in further proof of his increasing health he took up a little silver drinking cup and pressed it flat in his hands with a quiet laugh. Joseph picked up the cup with a comical expression and immediately set about punching it out.

"Yes, yes, that's all very well," he said, "to be able to smash up expensive silver tankards, but I'm thinking of another sort of strength," and he touched his forehead significantly.

Leonard caught up the brush again and went on with his picture as if he had not heard, but in a moment stopped painting, and looking over his shoulder, said quietly:—

"You need not fear that, Bolton, if there ever was any danger it has passed away. Leave me to my work, for there is safety."

And so the autumn leaves were blown by the winds and frozen by the snow of winter, and the world rolled on in its carriages and pairs, or trudged on with weary feet, and forgot, in its pomps and vanities, its toils and cares, the romantic marriage of Lillian Garton, the heiress, and her still more romantic disappearance. Towards October there was a rumor, whence spread, heaven only knows, that the mysterious Lord St. Aubyn was returning to England, but rumor lied, as usual, for he did not make his appearance, and the upper ten thousand waited and watched for its lion in vain.

Had St. Aubyn returned at that time, the whole fabric of Raymond Garton's planning would have fallen to the ground, burying him in its ruins. But Lord St. Aubyn, though he had left Narin with the intention of returning to England had turned off and reached Spain. He was weary of England and as restless in these latter days as of old; rapid traveling, constant change of scene and occasional danger kept him from thinking. As he received neither letters nor newspapers, and made it a rule never to hold converse with that amphibious animal, the Tourist, he knew nothing of what went on in the London world. When he thought at all, lying on the grass wrapped in his rug with his knapsack for a pillow, his face turned up to the stars, he still thought of Lillian who had taken the place of his gold, old love, still shining sun like, in the villa at St. John's Wood, and of Leonard Grantley as the young artist, rising day by day, in popular favor, making love to the woman he loved and helped forward by the money he had placed at the disposal of the eccentric picture dealer. Often when the south wind stirred the trees and seemed to blow as the north wind had blown that night, Harold Grantley had sobbed out his life's breath, the remembrance had been somewhat dimmed and softened by the thought that he had held out his blood stained hand to help, even though slightly, the dead man's brother. Had he, however, known what a trial his money and the saved Leonard his heart would have leaped for joy, but he knew nothing of what had passed, and daily and hourly was he fighting against his dislike to return to London and meet Leonard and Lillian again, but could not fight the fight sturdily enough, for he was always vanquished.

CHAPTER XLV.
BURIED FROM THE WORLD.

The monastery bell tolled clearly in the chill October air, and the peasant guarding his sheep, or tilling his patch of vineyard, reverently doffed his hat and uttered an Ave Maria, for he knew that the bell tolling so sorrowfully was but announcing another death to the world, and that the same bells would ring out a solemn peal of gladness in a few minutes to welcome the soul garnered into the church. For the tolling bell announced that a novice had taken the veil, and was, therefore, dead to the world, and the glad peal afterwards rang her into the heaven prepared for the saved sisters. Standing against the little wicket gate that guarded the path to the nunnery, Raymond Garton heard the bell, and as the last toll changed into a joyful clang, he gave a cry in answer and stood trembling with a white face like one possessed.

"At last!" he exclaimed, hoarsely. "At last, Lillian Grantley, you are dead indeed! As dead as if you were indeed buried beneath the stone that bears your name. Dead! And I—'Raymond Garton,' have won!"

He seemed overpowered by his success, his knees knocked together as he stood and trembled, and his heart beat wildly in time and unison with the clanging belfry. "Dead!" he cried again, "and no blood shed," and he lifted his hat shudderingly, to wipe the sweat from his forehead.

"Lucky girl," he hissed, "there is no knowing what I should have done if she had not turned up, for I am desperate," he cried hoarsely, addressing the silent, swaying trees, that seemed to watch with living interest his fearful emotion, and wonder among themselves that this vile plotter, trembling on the threshold of success, should be called a Lord of Creation, while they had stood there centuries swaying with the winter wind, and scorching be neath the burning sun unmoved and indifferent. "There is no knowing what I might have done," he repeated, looking fearfully along the ground, and then through the trees, to the dismal sky, "no knowing! I must have the money now I've gone through so much, I could not have lost! She was sickly and ill, she can't live long, or where would have been the harm in—" and he stopped his hoarse mumbling to turn and glare at the nunnery, shining whitely on the hill. Well is it for you, Lillian Grantley, that you are safe in yonder chapel, bedecked in white as spotless as yourself, for were you beside the guilty wretch now, the dark pines would have a tale to tell that would be best untold. He glared for a moment out of the depths of his restless eyes at the nunnery, as if he would have fain torn the poor girl from her refuge, and made the game certain by killing her in very truth; and then turned and walked down the path.

Meanwhile the long line of white-robed nuns knelt before the glittering altar, and chaunted with an inspiring solemnity the "Ave Maria," and the fair Lillian, more lovely than ever, lay in the coffin bedecked with flowers and lace, as a symbol that she was buried to-day and for ever from the world that had brought her so much pain. Day by day the wife and wifes of Raymond Garton had been brought to bear upon her weariness. Almost every hour he overwhelmed her with pity, keeping the wound ever open and smarting, always pointing by hints or plain-spoken words to the nunnery on the hill as her only refuge and resting place, and ever managing that the sisters should hover about her with their calm, placid faces, and their low-toned voices. To the girl, romantic and tired of the world's show with the love for Leonard—for each day the passion had grown into true love, so certain is it that we long for that we cannot have, or having had once, have lost for ever—struggling have, or having had once, have lost for ever—struggling hard at her heart, the prospect ever before her gaze seemed at last a haven and rest; she expressed at last the wish to become a nun, to rest for ever and to be at peace, and so Raymond Garton consented, with seeming reluctance, and prepared the way for her. No one had heard her name in the village, the few peasants who had brought her flowers, and the people at the inn called her madamoiselle, for the future her name would be Sister Madeline, and the names Lillian Grantley be here no more.

CHAPTER XLVI.
DEAD!

Leonard Grantley was sitting on the stump of an old oak, watching the river as it hurried past to its grand destination—the ocean, watching it with grave face and mournful eyes, and thinking how like the never resting river, his own life was flowing on and on to that great end whose name is death. Here and there the current rushed on and broke over some round stone, or buried trunk of a tree, but it hurried past as if eager to catch the foam that floated on ahead and had not a moment to lose in its ceaseless journey. Half a mile from the spot where he was sitting the Weir sung its song all day long, and foamed and leaped from the worm eaten barriers into the rocky pool beneath. To him the falling water spoke, and plainly, and ever as he listened, with grave, still face, he heard an invitation and welcome in the dull roar.

"Come! come!" it seemed to say, and sometimes as he stood with folded arms, in the clumsy wooden punt he used for sketching, a great unseen influence seemed drawing him towards the fleeting river, and he longed with a longing he tried hard to overcome, to flow down with the stream to the sea that would cover him and his grief from human ken, for ever more. He was growing towards even as he sat and watched, his head bare to the chill blast, his hat was in his hand, and his eyes bent musingly on the river. He was waiting for Joseph, who had promised to come down to him, and he looked up once or twice along the narrow path through the wood, to see whether the dealer came. Somehow, to-night, the dead weight at his heart weighed heavier than usual, and the solitude, generally so near to him, grew painful in the extreme. The Weir seemed more awful and distinct than ever with its dire invitation, and he was glad when Joseph's step sounded on the grass. As Bolton came up behind him, there was a troubled look upon his face and a nervousness in his manner more marked than ever, and he kept behind Leonard, as he said:—

"What, Leonard, you!"

"No, I had forgotten it," said Leonard, taking it out of his pocket and filling it. "We, what did you do with the last?"

"Ah, as usual," said Bolton, "got the price I asked, and got it readily."

"I am glad of that," said Leonard, gravely, "though I cannot understand, I paint so hurriedly."

"Yes, you do," said Bolton, "but you paint better each day."

He sighed as he added, seating himself on the root of the fallen tree and pulling his coat collar up with trembling fingers:—

"I wish you would not stick so hard at it, Leonard, there is no occasion to now, you know. Your debts are almost paid off."

"You forget," said Leonard, still eyeing the stream. "I owe you three thousand pounds."

"I do not deserve this, Leonard," Bolton replied in a wounded tone.

"No nor did I mean to hurt you, my good friend," said Leonard, earnestly. "I know you would rather let me owe it you to all eternity, but that cannot be."

"Well, well," said Joseph, eagerly. "At any rate there is no hurry; you work and work until every particle of life is taken out of you. Oh, Mr. Leonard, if——"

"If what, Joseph?" said Leonard.

"If you would be something like your old self again! Why!" he exclaimed, with honest mournfulness, "I'd rather see you going the pace you were before. I'd rather see you in the hands of that scoundrel Levy, and all—the—the rest of the Jews, than see you so joyless and spiritless as you are now! You never smile, you have never laughed since—since—I can't remember," broke off Joseph, pitifully. "You work, work, morning, noon and night, as if your life depended on it. You don't rest at all!"

"What am I doing now?"

"Not resting," answered Joseph, decidedly. "Is it rest to sit and think over the past, and mourn over it until you're obliged to fly to your easel to paint it out? Forget the past——"

Leonard caught his arm with a sob that startled him.

"Oh, Joseph—Joseph!" he cried, struggling hard to keep the lump in his throat down. "I cannot! If you knew how I struggle against the terrible weariness all day and all night! God knows I have tried to pray the man, and tear her heartless image from my soul, but I cannot! Joseph, I did not love her once; it was a base passion, not love, but I love her now—love her devotedly—I love her more each day, and I carry her sweet face before my eyes, waking and sleeping. Ah, Joseph! if you knew how I struggle to be cold and stern, and how I break down inwardly every moment!"

And he covered his face and sobbed like a child. Joseph laid his hand tremblingly upon his shoulder.

"Forgive me, Mr. Leonard; for heaven's sake don't give way, for you've more to bear yet."

"What?" was all Leonard uttered, turning his working face to the nervous red, troubled one above him. "What?"

At the simple question and the stern, questioning eyes, poor Joseph quailed as if he had committed some sin, and stood tongue-tied. How could he tell him?

"What?" repeated Leonard, watching the quivering lips and frightened face with wild eyes. "It—it—any thing that has happened to—Lillian?" he asked, springing to his feet, clutching Joseph by the arms, and nearly ...ring his shoulder in his strong grasp, "she is not ill—she is not—not dead!" Joseph struggled until he got his hands before his eyes. He could not bear the sight of the suffering face.

"Not dead!" repeated Leonard, in a hoarse whisper. "Ah!" he cried, with a groan, "she is!" and he bowed his face upon his hands and turned to the water.

Five, ten minutes passed, he still standing motionless, then Joseph Bolton walked up to him timidly and touched him.

"Leonard!"

Leonard turned and raised his head. The face was perfectly white and the eyes were dry, but there was such a world of despairing anguish about the mouth, that the sight wrung a cry from the picture dealer——

"Oh, Leonard, Leonard! don't look like that, its just for all the world like my poor boy looked the night he—Oh, come, come, I will never let you out of my sight after this."

To Correspondents.

☞ We never answer questions by mail. All addressed to us seeking information will be answered through this column only.

B. S. G., Chicago, Ill.—"1. Suppose, in playing a game of casino, the deuce and three are on the table, can A, who holds an ace and six in his hand, and whose turn it is to ply, combine the deuce and three on the table and play the ace on them, making six, and take them with six on his next turn to play? 2. Suppose A cannot combine cards on the table and build on them from his hand. 3. Suppose A holds an ace and eight in hand, and seven, six, two, five and three are on the table, can he play his ace on the seven, making eight, and combine the six and five and three, leaving them to be taken with his eight in hand on his next turn to play? B claims that A exhausted his play when he built the seven to eight, and that he must leave the other cards uncombined until his next turn to play." ——1. Yes; providing B cannot combine and take it with a six he may hold. 2. He can. 3. B is wrong. A's play was perfectly correct; he cannot take them with his first play, but must await his next play before he does so. You are right in your positions, for a player cannot build on the cards on the board, unless he holds a card to take such build.

SUBSCRIBER.—1. The probabilities are that you are correct, but we make no data to make a positive answer, as by research in old and new books or authorities, we cannot find such a case referring to Chester; but, says Chambers' Encyclopædia, "attempts to murder were, until recently, punishable in England like capital felony"—murder; but that law was annulled in 1884. In other parts of England many such cases have no doubt happened, but we find no record particularly referring to Chester. In Australia, however, we are credibly informed, such cases occur up to the present time. 2. Don't quite see why not being a regular game, where it is kept. 3. The highest takes the deal. 4. The fastest time a mile has been skated in is 1min. 86sec., by W. Clark. 5. At auction pitch, when the count for game is tie between two or more players, the point for game is not counted.

CULLEN, Baltimore.—Had the red ball not been off the spot, then the cue ball would be taken off the board; but if the red ball had been played off the spot, then the player had the choice of playing on the red ball or the one on the spot. The latter is generally played unless the spotted red ball, all of such are considered dead, but after the red ball has been once struck, then the game is alive, and the player may play on any ball they please or on no ball, without any loss, unless they happen to pocket one, when their only penalty is no count. This is according to the regular English game.

MISS BALL, Troy.—The averages prepared for publication must be limited to the following formula:—Players, games, times at bat, first-base hits, average. The pitcher's averages should include the following statistics:—Players, games, chances for outs, first-base hits off the pitching—and "earned runs" by opponents. The fielding statistics include the total put out and assisted, with average to a game. Send also total scores of games played, giving date of each game, etc., as given in the monthly professional list recorded in the CLIPPER during the season.

PAUL, Baltimore.—If we take the figures of the entire list voted for, we cannot, as stated in our last, undertake to say whether Bishop, for Judge of Orphan's Court, runs behind his ticket or not. You merely send us the figures for the three independent judges, which do not afford us the data to show whether a person makes a calculation, for the highest of those three may be ahead of his ticket, at the same time that the lowest may not be behind. We have no other answer to make, and regret that we are unable to decide your bet, in the absence of all the figures.

CASINO, San Francisco.—"A and B are playing casino; A has a pile of eights built, and there is only one more card on the table (a queen); B holds in his hand a queen and an eight; now to prevent A from getting cards he lays his eight and plays the queen, and to prevent him from making a sweep he does not take up the queen. A insists on him taking up the queen, which he refuses to do, and claims a game for having in a few words, 'which is right?'——He can either throw down the queen separate, or take both queens up, as he thinks proper.

CALLER OU.—1. There are many English race horses that have won more at two years old than three-year-olds, but Harry Hill, among them Lord Lyon, Thormanby, Flying Dutchman, King of the Forest and a host of others. Harry Bassett only ran four times at two years old, and eight times at three-years old—including one walk over. 2. The fastest time for the English Derby is 2:48, made by Kettledrum and Blair Athol. 3. A walk over is included in races won.

DION, Philadelphia.—1. If, at auction pitch, none of the players make a bid, and it comes round to the dealer, then he, the dealer, may place what amount he thinks sufficient for the game he will make. He is not subject to penalty, however, even if he does not make a point. 2. In the same game, if "game" results in a tie, the point may not be counted. In this it differs with all fours.

X., Meadville, Pa.—1. Coburn and Mace have agreed to fight on Nov. 30th, near New Orleans. See article upon the subject in another column. 2. The stakes are said to be $2,500 a side. 3. The stakes in their Canada match were not given to either. $1,50 a side being added for the present match, it is alleged. 4. Ned O'Baldwin's height is 6 feet 5¼ inches in his stockings.

BOBBY, Boston.—1. The average stride of a race horse is about 23 feet. Boston horses are considerably reduced up. 2. Longfellow's stride was close on 27 feet. 2. There is no record of either Eclipse or any other horse having ever run a mile in one minute; it is a popular error. 3. The fastest mile running time recorded in this country is 1:43, made by both Lexington and Saltus.

J. R., Madison, Wis.—Your questions are too numerous to answer separately. One general answer will suffice. The only way to become a comedian is to go upon the stage and commence at the foot of the ladder and work yourself up. After a long term of experience you can judge whether you would excel in comedy, tragedy or neither. 2. We do not require a correspondent there.

BILLIARDS, Carthage.—Were your idea to prevail the game might never end, as it would be No. 2's object to keep the game and No. 1's sole care to avoid a forfeiture, in preference to risking anything by attempting to pocket the remaining ball. The rule, made as it was, by men who understood the game, is proper, and the game is far superior to one conducted under your idea.

RED JACK, Sharpsburg, Pa.—Dexter's fastest time is 2:17¼, made at Buffalo, Aug. 14, 1867. 2. Goldsmith Maid's fastest time is 2:17, made at Milwaukee Sept. 6, 1871. 3. The Athletics. 4. Ned Searles, 5ft 11¾, at 15lbs. 5. The fastest time is 1:43, made by both Lexington at Lexington, Ky., last May, by Saltus and Fadladeen. 7. Josh Ward, 25 min. 10 sec., Staten Island.

M. L. HARVEY, New Concord, Ohio.—1. The reason why the pennant is awarded to the Athletics is because they have won 22 legal games, and lost 7 such games, to the Bostons' 22 and 9, thus taking the lead by the fewest games lost. The Chicago nine closed play Oct. 5 th, with a credit of but 30 games won, and a charge of 9 lost. The time was not extended. 2. Pinkham is on the sick list.

BOB HART, St. Louis.—The fastest steamboat time on the Mississippi, up stream, of which we have any record, is as follows:—New Orleans to Natchez, 16 hours 36 minutes and 47 seconds, by the R. E. Lee, Oct. 23th, 1870; New Orleans to St. Louis, 3 days 13 hours and 14 minutes, by the same steamer, July 4th, 1870.

BASE BALL CLUB, Cincinnati, O.—At auction pitch, each having but one to go, B, making that game, proves that A was not in the back, consequently his high puts him out before A's low. Had B not made game he would have been set back, and A would have been the winner.

DON BROCK.—1. The Lydia Thompson Troupe first appeared in America at Wood's Museum, in this city. 2. The troupe comprised the following principal members:—The Misses Lydia Thompson, Ada Harland, Pauline Markham, Lisa Weber and Mr. Harry Becker. 3. We do not give the names of our correspondents.

W. S. M., Easton, Pa.—1. The original conditions of the match having been changed (the number of birds shot at being altered from 21 to 15) all bets previously made are off, unless renewed by mutual consent. 2. In case of a match not being finished, but postponed until next day, all bets stand.

FIX POOL.—"Four players, money up. First player draws his ball and shoots, making a natural before the other three players have drawn their balls. Is he (the first player) entitled to the pool?"——If the first player had the ball that entitled him to the first play, he won the pool.

FRANK.—1. In playing euchre, hearts are trumps. A leads the left bower; B has no trumps. A then plays the king of diamonds; B beats it with the ace. A contends that B should have played the ace of diamonds on the left bower. Is A right?.....No; B played correctly.

J. McG., Boston.—Nothing can beat four aces at bluff. In some places a straight flush is played to beat four aces, but this is exceptional, and requires a previous special agreement among the players.

F. L. L., Milbury, Mass.—1. We have always found them reliable. 2. The proposed match between Bassett and the English horse Sterling has not been consummated. 3. Mace and Coburn are matched to fight on the 30th of November.

W. I. K., Exeter, N. H.—The best three mile time, with a turn, by a shore collage crew, is 17min. 43½sec., by Harvard, when they were beaten by the Ward Brothers, Lake Quinsigamond, July 24th, 1868.

E. M.—C having examined his hand and passed, and not having stated that he had seven more cards until after another player, B had made the trump, our opinion is that the play holds good, a card being drawn from C's hand.

W. E. G., Quebec, C. E.—At forty-fives, with clubs for trumps, the ace of hearts, which is always a trump, being led, and you have no clubs, you can play from any other suit you please. You couldn't be compelled to play a heart.

HANDLEY, Philadelphia.—"At cribbage, A plays a king, B makes it 15, A pairs the 5, B plays a 4. A cannot play, B plays a 5 and takes the run, then another 4 and claims another run. Is B entitled to his last?".....No; how can 4, 5, 4, form a sequence?

TROJAN, Boston.—A, although a dead head, lost the bet, as, although he might not actually have paid, still he was the debtor, as he represented the house, which made no demand for A, the loser's, indebtedness.

J. Nasby, Philadelphia.—1. Boston, Troy, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Washington, Cleveland, New York and Rockford. 2. "Nelson is his name." 3. They will return in season, should they go. 4. Read our comments on the professionals.

F. M., Washington, D. C.—1. Miss Effie Mitchell has played the French fay. 2. Sestique is usually played with two or three euchre packs. 3. Two queens of spades and two knaves of diamonds constitute a double bezique.

M. F., Buffalo.—You had better communicate with one of our dramatic agents, whose cards may be seen in another part of this paper.

T. F. R., Attleboro, R. I.—You require only city and sometimes county license. Apply to the town or city clerk. The prices vary in each town.

O. B. S., New Orleans, La.—Gas for illuminating the stage was first introduced in this city at the opening of the Bowery Theatre, Oct. 23d, 1826.

A VICTIM OF THE FIRE, Chicago.—In all-fours a player does not lose his deal in case of a mis-deal, as that would deprive the elder hand of his beg.

PETER, Keokuk.—The longest throw on record by a steam fire engine is 311 feet 8 inches, solid stream—338 feet spray—by Mississippi No. 2, 100 feet of hose, 1¾ inch nozzle, at New Orleans.

ARTFUL YANKEE, Mo.—The minstrel business is over crowded, and there would be but little opportunity for a novice to get a situation with any troupe.

J. J. McG.—We do not answer questions in this department which involve personal opinion of the relative merits of any professional persons.

C. W. B., Alton.—Two points are all that may be taken for counting thirty-one at cribbage; one more for last card is illegal. If in allowing, when fifteen is made with the last card.

LADY, Elmira, N. Y.—You neglected to sign your letter. You had better write to one of the dramatic agencies who advertise in the CLIPPER. We never procure engagements for professionals.

DRAMATIC STAFF, Opera.—1. Theodor Wachtel was born in Germany. 2. His name is pronounced as if spelled *Wockt*el. 3. See answer to J. J. McG., in this issue.

WALSH, Scranton, Pa.—The new edition of the new Hoyle gives the deal to the player next but to the player who takes the deal, Jack being counted high. In the euchre pack the ace of trumps is not the best.

LADY FRANKLIN, Hoboken.—We do not keep a record of the movements of military, literary or political people. Joe Jefferson's weekly salary was stated at $500 in the CLIPPER.

T. C. M., New Orleans, La.—1. Joseph Dion's lowest average at the three ball game (he kept 1,126.12). 2. He was champion from May, 1858, to December, 1860.

HARMONY, Jersey City.—1. R. Cassedy has the largest room in Brooklyn, N. Y., having eighteen billiard tables. 2. Van Cleaf's has nineteen tables. Since the Coleman fire these are the largest.

BRUNO, Hamilton, C. W.—We are not positive but think that T. Hoggard and W. Burley were matched for $100 a side in 1860, and that Burley received forfeit.

J. W. C., Sacramento, Cal.—1. J. C. Heenan was born at West Troy, N. Y. 2. He fought Harrison Oct. 20th, 1858. 3. He resides at this city.

C. P., Wyandotte.—1. It cannot yet the 4 spot on row, five and six, built by A, and called three, and then three with his 10 spot at once count play. A's play in putting his 4 on the 5 and placing it on the spot at the head was perfectly correct.

EXMOR, New Orleans.—1. We have not the programme and are determined to remain in ignorance. 2. During the winter. 3. Probably in our next. Thanks for your attentions.

CAP. CHESSMAN.—Odds—At forty-fives, diamonds being trumps, A leading the 5 of hearts, B saying no diamonds, is not forced to play a heart, as the sum of hearts is a trump always.

STAMP, Bloomington.—Davis ran 100 yards in 9¾ seconds, at Chicago, July, 1867, and W. H. Young, of Paterson, N. J., in September, 1868.

F. W. P., Binghamton.—If you have a good situation you will act sensibly by keeping it. As matters now stand, there's nothing to be made by following professionalism.

ROCHESTER.—1. It is built of stone. 2. The bow oar in a four-oared crew is No. 1, and the stroke No. 4. 3. We do not know whether it was sold after his death or not.

WAVERLY PLACE.—The city of New York cannot be said to have gone either republican or democratic, the reform element carrying the day.

J. C. N., New York.—The suits have nothing whatever to do with deciding the value of two flushes at poker. The highest card in the two hands governs.

W. H. C., Boston.—1. No; they were never defeated in the country. 2. Eggler will play centre field in the Athletic nine in 1872. 3. Brougham is Ireland, McGeagey in America.

W. R. A., Boston.—If regular wines were specified when the bet was made, the bets are off. The game in question was only an exhibition game.

ALL ABOARD.—We had an election last fall, and quite a number of people were elected to one office or another. Before the election there seemed to be two or three sides, or parties, as it were; but after the polls all hands appear to have come together, and the closing of the polls all hands appear to have gone the closing way, if we are to credit all we hear. Generally speaking, the betting their bottom dollar on the horse-tail nag seem to have been thrown heavily, and have gone into winter quarters for repairs; while the bob-tail nag seem to have been the enthusiastic supporters of the "Thunderbolt" could not have been more surprised had they been "struck" by lightning from a clear sky." The general result was a surprise to everybody, and the Reformers more so. Hereafter very properly be called the surprise party. Papers which, before the election, went in "hot and strong" and toe-nail for "the other side," as Chad. says, and themselves rowing in the same boat with the Victors after the result had been made known, and they actually believe that that was the same vessel that they had always been traveling on. In this delightful state, it has been found useless to bring out the Salt River boat, as there are no passengers waiting to procure their tickets at the captain's office. Several prominent office holders have given up their positions since the election, and the people accept the same with calm resignation. Verily, we are a joyful and united people, probably.

INTERNATIONAL HORSE RACE.—The rumor of a match between the race horses Sterling, of England, and Harry Bassett, of the United States, has created an unusual degree of interest on both sides of the Atlantic; the London press, especially, commenting on the same at great length, as may be seen from the extracts we have given on one of our outside pages. One of the papers has an eye to the main chance, and shows how the Britisher can make barrels of money by agreeing to have the race take place in this country; and "John" is right, too; for such an important equine contest would be witnessed by upwards of fifty thousand persons, and "free list suspended with the exception of the public press." By all means let "John" think it over. There's money in it. The Britisher would secure a big divvy, win or lose.

COLORED COACHMEN are beginning to take the places occupied by white men, seeing that it is difficult to tell which is the master and which the man, since one looks as dignified and gentlemanly as the other when the white element is employed. The "new departure" will give a little more color to the claims of the master.

THE USUAL New Year Address of letter carriers has been prohibited by the postmaster-general. This, doubtless, has reference to males only; the carriers will have the privilege of continuing their addresses to females, as heretofore, but the same will not be permitted to the mail carriers.

GOLDSMITH MAID VS. LUCY.—Just as our forms were going to press we received a telgram dated Philadelphia, Nov. 13, saying that "Goldsmith Maid and Lucy trotted at Suffolk Park to-day. 8,500 people were present. The weather was fine, but the track very heavy. Won by the Maid in three heats. Time, 2:25½; 2:00; 2:28.

"OUR JIM" can't make out how the Athletics became champions by their last game. We read to him the result of the play, which showed that the Chicagoes only got one run, and the Athletics won. "That's what I call a tie," says the boy.

JUBILANT.—So delighted were some of the friends of the Athletics at the result of their last game with the Chicago nine, that one enthusiastic party gave a disinterested spectator a bat, who immediately gave a bawl in return.

LIMBURGER CHEESE, "which cannot be told from that imported," is now manufactured in Wisconsin. They also manufacture poudrette in Philadelphia, so that the competition promises to be lively between the two places.

10-40.—The third jubilee of the Ten-Forty Club is to be held in American Mechanics' Hall, Philadelphia, on Friday evening, December 1st, on which occasion the "10-40's" will not care to be alone.

EXHILARATING.—An exchange says that at a recent reception in this city five hundred bottles of champagne was drunk. It fails to tell us, however, how many of the men who participated were drunk.

A SOCIETY was lately formed in Louisville, Ky., for the prevention of cruelty to wives. A weak invention of the enemy—a device, probably, to draw attention from wives' cruelty to husbands.

"COMMISSIONER BELL has resigned," said a disgusted office holder the other day. "So I've been tolled," was our Jim's involuntary answer.

ON BEING TOLD that Ingersoll, the great chair-man of the new court house, had been arrested, "Our Jim" cried out for "three cheers."

BILLIARDS.

THE INDIANA BILLIARD CHAMPIONSHIP.

In reference to this championship we have received the following card:—

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 8th, 1871.

ED. CLIPPER.—The backers of the present billiard champion of this state have "brewed a brush" in this city during the past few days, in the form of a general uproar and disturbance, and as a consequence of their disgraceful conduct, that it must needs be ventilated in your paper. For some two years past a little rivalry has existed between the backers of Porter A. Byers, of Lafayette, and those of Mr. Garratt, of this city, as to who was best entitled to the championship of the state. In the first match game between them (1.5m) points up, carom, according to the rules of the State Association), Garratt beat his competitor handsomely. In the last contest between them, played in the Indianapolis Washington Hall some two weeks ago, the game was very close and exciting, and had it not been for the adverse and unjust ruling of the umpire, Fred. Ackerman, of Ohio, would have resulted in Byers' favor. The "situation" of said ruling was thusly:—Byers, by remarkably good play around the table, and by dexterous cushion shots, had driven the balls down toward one corner, and in good position for one of his noted delicate carom runs. He played upon the "white," went to the "cushion," and came back on the "red." The carom upon the white was very delicate, and yet sufficient to be observed by at least one half of the audience. The umpire was not looking at the shot, Garratt's referee (Thomas, of Ohio), claimed "no count," and he was instantly supported in it by Ackerman. The decision was received with hisses and groans, but was submitted to by Byers without a murmur. Of course it "rattled" the Lafayette lad, and he missed the shot, the game was a mere matter of certainty for Garratt, although he only won by 18 points. The "rattling" gave the champion the advantage of 111 points, for the balls were left in favorable position, and he scored 129 that many from them.

The rules of the state association prescribe that when a contestor for the championship is beaten he shall not challenge the winning party again within ten days from former match. One reason alleged for this is to give other parties an opportunity to challenge the champion. The last game between Byers and Garratt commenced at 8 P. M., Thursday, October 26th, and was concluded between eleven and twelve o'clock. Last Sunday night the ten day limit expired, and between eight and nine o'clock John Huegele, treasurer of the association, was waited upon by Messrs. Hull, Doyle and Comstock, backers of Byers, and by them presented with another formal challenge from Byers to Garratt, for the state championship. The document was accompanied with the necessary forfeit money. The treasurer refused to receive the challenge, giving as a reason that he never transacted business upon the Sabbath. Mr. Hull then asked why it was that he had his saloon open and was selling liquors? Mr. H., seeing the gentleman was too bulky for him to put "standard roof" over his left "optic," turned his back and left Byers' friends without ceremony. The latter at once laid the situation before the editor of the Daily Sentinel, of this city, a paper, by the way, heretofore supported Garratt through thick and thin. Monday morning's issue contained a bitter article, scoring the ambient Huegele for his lack of "good faith." The next morning's issue treated in a "card," in which he gave the same reason as stated above for not receiving the challenge, and further claimed that the ten day limit did not expire until after eleven o'clock Sunday night, and, per consequence, that he had no right to entertain it. Now mark the sequel.

It should have been stated above that Mr. Huegele informed Hull and his associates that if Byers' challenge was presented the next morning he would accept it on behalf of Mr. Garratt. The next morning the gentlemen again presented themselves at the treasurer's saloon, when they were informed that Mr. Huegele had "gone hunting, and would not return until night." This "skipping out" excited considerable talk, but no "foul play" was thought of until the afternoon papers appeared, when, lo! there was published a challenge from one Van Cleve, of Greencastle, dated Saturday, Nov. 4th. This challenge was read with derision, for it is well known that the Greencastle man cannot play a good amateur game. At the state tournament room, two years or more ago, he joined the association, and entered as competitor for the "cue." Such was his lack of skill that even his own friends were ashamed to tell where he hailed from, and in the only one game played (with Kurtz, of Lafayette,) his average was too low to be estimated.

On the return of Huegele from his "hunting trip" he was again waited upon by Byer's friends, when he informed them that Van Cleve's challenge was entitled to precedence, and would be accepted by Garratt, provided no favorable terms, such as above, were found sufficient to justify them (as they allege) in making the following change:—

1. That Garratt's friends are afraid of the Lafayette lad's skill, and will not put up money on the latter unless him.

2. That the challenge purporting to come from Van Cleve was the result of the "council of war," held by Garratt's friends late on Sunday night, and was not even dreamed of by Van Cleve at that time.

3. That early Monday morning the treasurer, instead of going on that "hunting trip," went to Greencastle and hired Van Cleve to consent to the arrangement, and play the "maternal" for that bogus challenge.

4. That dressing to meet Byers again in the billiard field, Garratt or his friends first tried to bribe a well known gentleman of this city, to issue a challenge, which proposition was indignantly refused.

Now, Mr. Editor, you may ask, why is Garratt desirous of playing against these inferior billiard trashs? To be entitled to the title of state champion he must hold the cue against all competitors for two years. That two year limit will expire January next; just time enough for the giving and acceptance of one more challenge. If Garratt is pitted against Byers in that interval, "Good bye, state championship!" for his "goose is cooked" sure enough; but if he can "stave" off the match, then in January he can retire upon his laurels and let the smaller fry fight for the next championship.

Mr. Huegele acknowledged visiting Greencastle, for when charged with the fact he eloquently responded "that it was nobody's business if he was." On Tuesday last Van Cleve came to this city, and as your correspondent is informed, was openly charged with selling himself to Garratt's interests; and what is more, the charge was not denied by him.

This morning Byers' challenge was returned unaccepted, and the "game" between Garratt and Van Cleve will come off some time during the coming month. It is understood that a meeting of the state association will be called by Byers' friends, and the action of the latter in Huegele's action will be overruled. The imbroglio has created intense interest and more or less indignation. The above, as near as can be ascertained, is a plain, unvarnished statement of facts.

CORTON TOWN.

RHINES vs DALY.

The contest at the three-ball game between Henry Rhines and Maurice Daly, which took place at Brooklyn Hall, in the City of Jhurdeas, on the night of the 6th inst., resulted in a decided victory for Daly, without the latter's having to do any first-class playing. The stake was 3 to 1 the side, and the table a 9x12 inverted carom —the same that had attracted so much attention at the American Institute Fair. Rhines started off at a killing pace, acquiring a lead of over one hundred before Daly had got clear of his first string. The latter, in the next inning, by a brilliant run, forged rewards he "came back" to about two and a quarter. In fact, he almost stood still. Now withstanding the immense lead he had at one time, he was beaten in 8 R. About $1,200 changed hands at the ball alone, one Chicago gentleman dropping $700. About the only winner was a well-known Brooklynite, who, while in Chicago, made the match on behalf of Daly. Below is the summary:—

BROOKLYN HALL, Nov. 7th.—A match for $200 a side between Master Daly, of New York, and Henry Rhines, of Chicago, three-ball game, 2,000 points up, on a Phelan and Collender 5x10 carom table. Score—Daly, 5-0; Rhines, 397. Averages—Daly, 4 86-119; Rhines, 3 40-119. Best runs—Rhines, 80; Daly, 64. Referee—Bud Schofield.

SLOSSON CHALLENGES GILLETTE.—A few days ago, at

Elmira, N. Y., Byron Gillette defeated George F. Slosson. The latter challenges the victor to some more of the same kind:—

IRVING HOUSE, Flint, Mich., Nov. 7th, 1871.

My friends here at home being dissatisfied with the result of the late game of billiards between Byron Gillette and myself, at Elmira, attributing his success more to accident than fine playing, I desire, through your columns, to challenge him to a return game, to be played either at Detroit or Flint, Mich., at his earliest convenience.

With respect, &c.
GEO. F. SLOSSON.

P. S.—I allow him $50 for expenses.

NEW ROOMS.—The Wm. M. Tweed Club, the Standard Club and the St. Francis Xavier Union have just opened billiard rooms, having in the aggregate six tables. Capt. J. S. Boyle is to open a room with four, in Thomas street, and Budd Schofield one with six in Fourth avenue. As with the clubs, the tables in these rooms will be the Phelan & Collender "Bowels."

DION VS. RHINES.—It is proposed that a good match would result were Cyrille Dion to give Henry Rhines 200 in 1,000 at the three-ball game. It is not unlikely that a match of some kind will result from this proposition.

DAVIS VS. RHINES.—The match for $500, at the three ball game, between Henry Rhines, of Chicago, and J. H. Davis, of Pittsburg, is announced for the 21st inst. It is to take place at Pittsburg.

THE GENERAL CHAMPIONSHIP.—Edward Daniels, of Boston, contemplates challenging Cyrille Dion to a bout for the Diamond Cue.

ARRIVED HOME.—George E. Phelan reached this city on the 7th inst. His losses by the San Francisco fire, allowing for insurance, were seventeen thousand dollars.

EXHIBITIONIZING.—Joseph Dion and Albert Garnier have been giving exhibitions in Western New York and Pennsylvania, with fair success.

A CHANGE OF FIRM.—The firm of Kleemann & Co., of Chicago, has been dissolved, and will hereafter be known as Stephani & Mompeimar

JOSEPH DION, by the 15th inst., will have played the first game with Henry Miller, of New Orleans, who is matched against him.

THE NEWARK CHAMPIONSHIP.—Mr. P. J. Kelly has defeated Mr. E. S. Starrs for the badge of the Catholic Institute.

PEDESTRIANISM.

SIX MILE RACE.—On Oct. 21st, Sam Barker, of Billingsgate, and Jack Brighton of Norwich, both of whom have held the title of Champion of long and, ran a six mile race, for $10 a side, at the Prince of Wales grounds, Row, London. On the pistol being fired by W. Worsden, the men broke away to a good start, Brighton leading for 20 yards, when his opponent rushed in front, and led at the close of the first lap by three yards. In the next circuit Brighton slightly decreased the distance, and the Billingsgate lad was only a yard in advance at the completion of a mile. Time, 5min. 5sec. Half way up the sprint path in the sixth lap Brighton dashed ahead, and was soon leading by five yards, but in another 100 yards Barker regained the lead, and at the second mile (time, 10min. 35 sec.) was leading by a yard. No alterations in their positions occurred in the next mile (time, 16min. 10sec.), but in the fourteenth lap the Norwich man again went in front, but finding he had his man safe, slowed Barker to retain the lead. The latter was running in fine form, but while rounding the last turn, for the 16th lap, his shoe being thoroughly saturated, burst, and in trying to recover it, he came down a cropper. Owing to this accident, Brigson soon held such a lead that it was impossible for man to overtake him. After he had consumed another lap Barker told the referee (H. Woodstock) that there was no necessity for Brighton to finish the distance, and Brighton was therefore declared the winner.

JOHN C. HOLMES, of Wyoming, Pa., publishes a challenge among our advertisements to walk any man in the state of Pennsylvania one mile for $50 a side; the challenge to remain open fifteen days from date of this issue.

THE JUMPING CHAMPIONSHIP.—We are in receipt of a communication from Ed. Sparies, champion jumper, who desires us to state that he cannot entertain the proposal made by Tom. Allen on behalf of Chas. Loomis, to jump for the championship six weeks from signing articles at St. Louis. The season, he says, is now too far advanced to consummate such a match before the spring of '72, and besides, says that he will not go to St. Louis to jump upon any consideration whatever. He says, however, that he will make a match with Chas. H. Loomis to jump one single standing jump, straight level, spring shoes debarred, for from $2,500 to $5,000 a side, the match to be decided sometime in June or July, half way between here and St. Louis, each man to defray his own expenses. This is a fair proposition and ought to bring about a match between these old rivals. Ned says he was open to match anybody in the world all summer, and that if Allen, or any other of Loomis' friends had made overtures then they could have been accommodated on fair terms. By the way, we have also received another letter from Allen, wherein he states that it was, as we supposed, an overnight upon his part not to "contribute an additional cent" for expenses in his challenge. He is willing to give Sparies $100 for that purpose, providing the jump takes place at St. Louis; but as Ned says he will not go there at all, there's an end on't.

HARLEM YACHT CLUB.—At a meeting of this club, held at their club-house, 125th street and East River, on the 8th inst., the following gentlemen were chosen officers:—Commodore, Wm. H. Gray; vice commodore, Geo. R. Gushing; corresponding secretary, Lewis Clark; recording secretary, Thos. H. Monk; treasurer, C. W. Allen.

A LIFE'S ROMANCE.

A story under the title of the "Unknown Love of Alice Carry," says Mrs. Mary Clemmer Ames, writing to a contemporary, is still traveling in the newspapers through the land. It asserts that in her youth she was influenced to Rufus W. Griswold that he was false to her, forsaking her for a woman of the world; that, long after, when he returned to New York, friendless, poor and sick, she forgave him the great wrong that he had done and nursed him till he died. This story, in many conflicting phases, was echoed, to her great annoyance, told of her during her life. The fact that Rufus W. Griswold did in his last will bequeath to her his personal effects was made much of in perverted and private circles, and used as an unanswerable proof that at one time he had been her lover. Within a week I have read in a letter to the New York Evening Post that the will proved the love and relationship between the two persons beyond a doubt. Yet no less, in its foundation, the story is false. Referring to it once, while we two sat alone together, Alice said to me:—"I will tell you just the truth. If you ever think it necessary you can tell it." I believe it to be but justice to her sacred life, with which idle gossip is yet too busy, to tell it now. Bereavement in death and in life had made her western home too desolate to be borne. There, with the impulse of the brave will that served her to the last, brought her to New York to make not the life that she would have chosen for herself, yet a life worthy to be lived. "Ignorance stood me in the stead of courage," she said. "Had I known the great world as I have learned it since, I should not have dared; but I didn't. Then I came." The leading literateur at that time was Dr. Rufus W. Griswold. He had compiled the books called "The Female Prose Writers" and "The Female Poets of America." "I was never engaged to him in marriage. I never loved him," said Alice Cary to me. "I could not have loved such a man, though I learned him in his best phases. I came to pity him, because he was his own worst enemy. As a friend I loved him much, and before he died I found it in my power to pay back in part my large debt of gratitude. When he returned to New York, poor and sick, with certain death before him, I, with Miss ——, hired a room and nurse for him. From that they have made the romantic story of my nursing him for unrequited love. It was old Betsey who nursed him. You know how big and strong she is; yet even she became worn out, for his sickness was long and very painful. Many naked, even cruel things have been said because he willed to me his personal effects. Besides the books and pictures which he bequeathed to the Historical Society, these were all that he possessed, and he left them to me—not more out of a personal regard than from a desire to repay, as far as he was able, the money which I had expended for his comfort during his last long sickness."

In the protoundest sense Alice Cary never loved but once. The man whom she loved is still alive; yet gossip, with its keenest scent, has never found or named him. With all her fullness of affection, hers was an eclectic and solitary soul. He who, by the very patent of his being, was more to her than any other mortal could be, might pass from her life, but no other could ever take his place. A proud and prosperous family brought all their pride and power to bear on a son, to prevent his marrying a girl uneducated, rustic and poor. "I waited for one who never came back," she said. "Yet I believed he would come, till I read in a paper his marriage to another. Can you think what life would be—loving one, waiting for one who would never come?"

He did come at last. I saw him. His wife had died, Alice was dying. The grey haired man sat down beside the grey haired woman. Life had dealt prosperously with him, as in its wont with men. Suffering and death had taken all from her save the lustre of her wondrous eyes. From her wan and wasted face they shone upon him full of tenderness and youth. Thus they met with life behind them—they who had parted plighted lovers when life was young. He was the man whom she forgave for her blighted and weary life, with a smile of parding as divine as ever lit the face of woman.

CHANGING THE RULES.—Bell's Life now contains communications each week urging certain changes in the English rules of cricket with a view of preventing the large scores and unfinished matches which have been such a drawback to the attractions of the game this past season. One correspondent suggests that the wickets be raised two inches in order to render the high delivery bowling more fatal. Another suggests that the bowler's crease for delivery shall be reduced to sixteen yards distance, keeping the present distance of twenty-two yards to be run by the batsman. Another recommends that every ball touched by a batter before reaching the ground be regarded as a catch. Another advises a reduction in the space occupied by the batsman by lessening the distance of the popping crease from the wicket. There is but one effective way to lessen large scoring, and that is to make it in defence of the wicket more difficult by placing the wicket stumps wider apart, or making them four instead of three, and increasing the length of the stumps.

SETTLES.—A match for $25 a side, 11 chalks, stand fair game, came off on the evening of Nov. 9th at King's Brewery Shades, West 42d street, between C. Redgrave and Ed. Hawkshaw. The former won easily, Hawkshaw being quite nervous throughout. The betting stood, at the conclusion of the game:—Redgrave, 11; Hawkshaw, 1. Another game is to be played on Tuesday evening, Nov. 14th, for a leg of mutton supper, the contestants being Tom Keyworth and Young, the walker, on one side, and Carson and Hawkshaw on the other.

THEATRICAL RECORD.

Time:—"Of the construction it need only be said that the scenes might be thrown in a heap and taken up haphazard without, we suspect, seriously interfering with the pleasure of the spectator or the comprehensibility of the play. The management has spared no expense in scenery, and the views of the yards of hotels in London and Ipswich, with other like matters, are excellent in all respects. Characteristic dresses were, moreover, provided for the male characters and for those of the female who will wear them, and the effect of some of the scenes in reproducing the familiar pictures is capital. Here all that can be possibly be said in praise ends. The dialogue is Dion and, with the salt forgotten; the events are those of the novel, deprived of their mirth-inspiring power. It is time, however, to show in what manner Mr. Albery has treated the story. The most serious loss he has, probably for good reasons, made to Mr. Micawber, who is made of Mrs. Bardell; Dodson and Fogg are left in the cold, and the life of Mr. Pickwick, in its stage presentation, passes void of matrimonial complication. A reason for this may be that the scene of the trial, Bardell vs. Pickwick, the manner of the latter being the most prominent part in it, are so familiar to the public that another presentation of them might detract from the freshness of the play. Around that vivacious impostor, Mr. Alfred Jingle, the interest of the comedy is made to ebullate. Introduced into the house of Mr. Wardle by Pickwick, upon whose open hearted nature he has made an impression, Jing'e becomes the successful rival of Tupman in the affections of Rachel Wardle. While Emily and Snodgrass are making slow progress with Arabella and Kenty, Jingle, with characteristic readiness, jumps into the heart of the too susceptible spinster and carries her off under the nose of the infuriated Mr. Pickwick. With these proceedings is occupied the first of the four acts into which the play is divided. And very shortly after Wardle pursues the famous boots in the yard of the White Hart and introduces him to Pickwick, his subsequent friend and master. Jingle is ran to earth and consents for a "consideration" to give up the partner of his flight. We then go to Bury St. Edmunds and learn the plot of Jingle and the consequent of Pickwick with regard to the ruin of the former upon Miss Weatherfield's boarding-school. Venturing, in order to carry into effect his philanthropic principles, over the wall of the seminary, Pickwick finds himself treated first as a burglar by the inmates of the house, then repudiated by his friends, who have misunderstood the nature of his intentions, and lastly carried off as a madman by the unscrupulous Jingle. For no particular reason, except to produce a well-known scene, Pickwick is then transferred to the Great White Horse at Ipswich, and takes part in the wedding festivities consequent upon the marriage of Winkle. As a result of these, he stumbles into a bedroom, and gets into that of Miss Witherfield, who is the beloved of Tupman. A well-known scene of the novel is then presented upon the stage, with an utter absence of the humor that is in the original. Pickwick's remarks upon his predicament, his heart rent, supplies Jingle with means to carry on a fresh scheme of wickedness, and his quarrel with Tupman gives the same inventive gentleman a means of getting rid of him. While Jingle, accordingly, is going to marry against her will, Emily Nupkins, Pickwick is arrested for an intention of fighting a duel. Good fortune carries him to the house of Nupkins, who is a justice of the peace, and the ridiculous charge brought against him is withdrawn, and soon results in convincing the magistrate that Jingle, whom he has chosen for a son-in-law, is an imposter. The end is now at hand. Pickwick's friends are made happy with their lady loves, Jingle, penitent, acknowledges his predecessor to be a "trump," and Sam Weller excitedly pronounces him an "angel in top boots." A test is improvised in Mr. Nupkins' room. A steaming bowl of Pickwick's favorite liquor is ordered in, and Pickwick led to the chair, sees himself cross-questioned by fair hands, and finally gives his benediction upon everybody. Here the curtain drops." The acting with the exception of Mr. Neary Irving as Jingle, did not give satisfaction, although it is said that "the actors chosen to play the parts are among the best in London." At the end of the play a bust of Charles Dickens, surrounded by the actors who had taken part in the representation, was displayed.....At the Adelphi, a farce entitled "Our Autumn Manœuvres," in two acts, was produced. The idea was suggested by the late campaign near Aldershot.....At the Globe "Joy is Dangerous," an adaptation of "La Joie Fait Peur," by Mr. Mortimer, who had amplified the plot into two acts, had been acted, but unsatisfactorily.....At the Haymarket the last six nights of the "Rivals" were announced, to be followed, on Nov. 6th, by "She Stoops to Conquer." Mr. Buckstone's annual benefit was announced for Nov. 15th ..... No changes had occurred at Drury Lane, Princess', Olympic, Sadler's Wells, Vaudeville, Prince of Wales, Surrey, nor Philharmonic.....At the Queen's the "tempest" was produced Oct. 28th .....The Court Theatre, under the management of Miss M. Litton, was re-opened for the season Oct. 28th, with the following new company:—Little Toddlekins, W. S. Gilbert's new and original comedy entitled "On Guard" and "A Little Witch."..... At the Pavilion, a new drama by J. Mackerry, entitled "Hilda's Inheritance" had been produced with success. This is said to be more especially the interest of the piece centering upon a clever and well designed view of Cremorne Gardens, with the illuminated dancing platform filled with dancers. It depicts scenes in both High and low life ..... At Sadler's Wells "Enter the Storm" and the "Marble Heart" constituted the attraction..... At the Alfred some performances of "Richard III" had alternated with "King John."

MRS. JOHN WOOD is to play an engagement at the Adelphi Theatre, London, Eng., commencing at Christmas.

ROBERT JOHN ROGERS, director of the Croydon Dramatic Company, died at Brighton, Eng., Oct. 26th, after a long and painful illness, in the thirty-fifth year of his age.

MR. AND MRS. ALFRED WIGAN, who closed an engagement at Liverpool, Eng., Oct. 21st, were presented by the members of the dramatic company with an elegant silver claret jug, and took their farewell of the stage on that evening.

AN ALARMING ACCIDENT occurred at the Folies-Marigny Theatre, Paris, France, Oct. 23d. One of the actors, M. Leduc, who wore a dressing gown, approached too near the footlights, which were uncovered, and he suddenly became enveloped in flame. Fortunately, those who were near him were enabled to extinguish the fire before he had received much injury.

A VERSION of the "Lay Days of Pesmond" will, ere long, be produced at the Queen's Theatre, London, Eng. Rumor, which attributes the adaptation to Mr. Oxenford, says also that Lord Lytton will personally superintend the production.

THE DARMSTADT THEATRE was completely destroyed by fire, on Oct. 24th, the outer walls and the stone staircase alone remaining. The decorations are burnt to ashes. The library has been saved. The fire probably originated at the lighting of the lamps in the proscenium. One of the persons engaged in lighting the theatre is missing, and it is supposed he has been burnt.

THE STRASBURG THEATRE is about to open for the first time since the war.

J. H. ALLEN, an American actor, while playing an engagement at Cheltenham, Eng., on Oct. 26th, acted "Richelieu," for the benefit of the fund for the relief of the Chicago sufferers.

AT THE ALEXANDRA THEATRE, Liverpool, Eng., a morning performance in aid of the Chicago sufferers was announced to take place on Nov. 2d, when, in addition to the company the following artists had volunteered their services:—J. L. Toole, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Paul, Edward Saker, Miss Fanny Josephs, G. J. Loveday and Mr. F. Kempster. The entire receipts, without any deduction, were to be devoted to the fund.

At the National Standard, Miss Rose Horsey and Mr. Parkinson came on Oct. 30th and Nov. 1st, in the "Bohemian Girl," and on the 2d and 4th in "La Sonnambula." On Oct. 31st and Nov. 3d, Miss Forrester Lancia and Mr. Nordikon sang in "Il Trovatore."..... At the Royalty, "Faustus; or, Love in a Dream" does not appear to have achieved much success. It is thus spoken of:—"It makes a few decided hits, winning corresponding applause, but the whole thing is of a type which has been done to death, and the general impression created before the level of the calm is not such as to encourage the hope of its permanency." Mr. Reece, the author, might easily have turned out a better thing. The composer of the music is Mr. Malsenzahn, who also conducts its performance. Very little effect is originality to attach either to the airs or concerted pieces."..... "Deserve de Husband," by Offenbach, was to have been produced for the first time in London, Eng., on Nov. 11th, at the Royal Philharmonic Theatre.

Circuses.

ASTLEY'S had re-opened successfully with a combined circus and equestrian spectacular performance. The performances are thus spoken of:—"And with the circus performances these include the usual amount of jumping through hoops and over banners, and also of leaping. In the first the family of Mr. Sanger, the proprietor, principally distinguished itself. Miss Lavinia Sanger, a young and very pretty rider, mounted gracefully attired, leaped on horseback with remarkable grace and spirit, and Miss Harriet Sanger and Master John Sanger similarized themselves by various acts of equitation. The jumping was led by Mr. James Holloway, and the Brothers Hooper executed feats in the former. What really distinguished the performance remains to be named. No quadrupeds more beautiful than those Mr. George Sanger exhibited have been seen in the arena and the performance of the trick horses were really remarkable. The clowns, too, were good, their feats being really comic and infinitely preferable to the dull business that has come in vogue of late. All these performances were well received by a house crowded in every part with a noisy and favorably disposed audience. The second part of the entertainment consisted of spectacular drama. This was of the most elaborate kind. Real advantages are offered by the cast, not only in the land of romance, mystery, [illegible] realm into terrible tragedy, but also in the scenery of gorgeous hues and gay colors. In the cast, accordingly, the plot was laid. The argument of the play, which is entitled "The Last of the Race; or, The Warrior Woman," is as follows:—Abdall, the tyrant King of Afghanistan, having put to death Almanzor, King of Georgia, is about to make war upon that country. Abdall, a Georgian soldier, has, through a fancied slight received at the hands of Semarha, Queen of Georgia, deserted to the Afghan cause; but King Akbar suspects his motive, and offers him the opportunity of going to a fortress where he is to be put to death. Abdall escapes upon the road, and again joins the Georgian ranks. Prince Almanzor being wrecked upon the Afghan coast, is taken prisoner and brought before the King, who casts him into a dungeon. Queen Semarha hears of her son's captivity, and, placing herself at the head of the army, and giving the tyrant battle, she is defeated and taken prisoner. The king offers her life and that of her son if she will renounce her religion to him. King Akbar condemns her to be executed in the public market place by the hand of her own son, when the city clock strikes the hour of three. The queen and her son are conducted to the scaffold, and are placed in the executioner's hands. Oppressed by anguish at the horrible task imposed upon him, he sinks senseless at his mother's feet. Sadat, a secret friend, offers to revive him with a powerful stimulant which he professes to possess. The king allows him and Sadat revives the queen. The king discovers that the warrior women, led by Abdall and backed by the mountaineers, are in full march upon the city. The executioner is ordered to strike off the prince's head without delay. The prince wrests the axe from him, and struggles for his life; at that moment the city gates are burst open. The warrior women and the Georgian, led by Abdall, attack the Afghans, who are defeated; King Akbar is slain, the Afghans are conquered, and victory is declared by Queen Semarha and Prince Almanzor, the last of the race.

Sanger's Circus visited Keswick, Eng., Oct. 23d..... The season at Cooke's Royal Circus at Scarborough is rapidly drawing to a close.

MLLE. LEOPARD.—A sad occurrence took place on the 28th of Oct., in the village of Emly, about five miles from Tipperary, Ireland. The Whittington menagerie, now on a tour to that country, had a performance, and a child, daughter to a publican named Phelan, was present. The child, a girl of 7 years, while the animal grasped and mutilated fearfully. Dr. Ryan performed amputation, but has no hopes of the poor child's recovery. The father of the child immediately went for a gun and shot the animal, which was a valuable one. The occurrence became infuriated at the occurrence and badly beat the manager and others connected with the menagerie, who had a narrow escape with their lives. They also smashed a number of carriages, and nearly annihilated the whole concern.

THE PRINTER'S LOVE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

BY NONPAREIL.

I'm lonely, love, lonely and sad to-night,
Thinking and dreaming of thee;
I've watched the fading of day's last light,
And the stars rising over the sea.
The day has been long, love, weary and long,
And shaded with terrible gloom,
Close folded within their fragrant cups,
The flowers forgot to bloom.

They were waiting, love, waiting to unfold
Their choicest beauties for thee;
But they wasted in vain, and neglect and cold
Are killing both flowers and me.
I'm lonely, love, lonely and sad to-night,
The hours creep listlessly by,
And, like a warning of sorrow to come,
I hear the whippoor will's cry.

I'm thinking, love, thinking, Oh! could I but know—
Oh! can the rift coming years
Hold many such hours of weariesome woe!
And so many womanish fears?
I'm weary, love, weary, with watching and grief;
Will the morning never dawn?
A footstep! 'Tis he; my darling comes,
And the shades of night are gone!

A ROMANTIC AND RAPID ESCAPE.

A MODERN KNIGHT RESCUES A LADY FROM AN UPPER WINDOW.

For several weeks past a Columbus, O., landlady has entertained Miss Rose Gerber, a young lady of rare accomplishments, especially in music, her education having been accomplished at St. Mary's Academy. Of Miss Gerber's history there is but little known. It appears that her presence in that city was objectionable to her friends, who reside in Chillicothe, and on the morning of the 1st inst., her mother, accompanied by two officers of Ross County, drove up to the boarding-house above mentioned, and produced a warrant for the arrest of Miss Gerber for the theft of a sum of money variously stated at from five to forty-five dollars. Before the officer could serve the warrant his design was communicated to the accused, and being favored by the attaches of the house, she was spirited to her room on the second floor, where she locked herself in, declaring that the charge was trumped up with the design of getting possession of her and compelling her to lead a life not in accordance with her tastes. Her pursuers followed her into the house, and while they are endeavoring to devise means to secure her, we will turn to a scene outside. The story of the attempted arrest had spread so rapidly that a whole crowd had collected, and in accordance with the most approved gallantry, popular sympathy ran with the lady. The situation was becoming interesting, and the sympathy and excitement became intense; every moment was precious, and it was the possibility of her capture. Where was the man that would rescue her? The flashing eyes of the multitude gazed southward, and as a respectable looking gentleman approached, with countenance vivid with interest, it was evident that the problem was about to be solved.

Capt. John A. Arthur, a clever gentleman, popularly known in journalistic circles, arrived on the ground while the excitement was at its height and rapidly took in the situation. The lady was imprisoned in a room, the window of which opened on a back yard; her pursuers were in the house devising diabolical plans for her capture; the work of rescue must be quick; a thought struck the captain; a ladder, a ladder, my kingdom for a ladder! and with bated breath, and a dread that would have eclipsed the performance of a New York circus, he rushed to the engine room of a newspaper building and seized a fourteen foot ladder. It was but short work to reach the window of the lady's room, and in less time than it takes to tell the tale she had made the descent and was deposited in a buggy which had been brought to the curbstone by a friend. The captain jumped in, and before the officers and the mother of the rescued lady became aware that they had been caught napping, the pursued was a considerable distance deponent.

The great haste with which the arrangements for flight were made caused an unfortunate selection of horseflesh. The animal doubtless did all he knew, but it required a vigorous application of the whip to work him into an appreciation of the part he was playing, and as the vehicle rolled over the Nicholson, with the captain applying the lash at every jump of the astonished equine, men, women and children stood in wondering admiration into the dashing gallantry of the improvised John. So far as known facts are concerned the story ends here, for at this writing nothing has been heard from the fleeting pair. The whole affair is wrapped in considerable mystery. The gentlemen engaged in the rescue doubtless considered they had substantial reasons for their proceeding; but if it were possible that the fears Miss Gerber is said to have expressed had any ground, a habeas corpus would have given her liberty.

"A WOMAN'S RIGHT TO BE A WOMAN."—Mrs. Celia Burleigh, on Nov. 6th, addressed a large audience at the Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass., before which body she demanded for women a platform as broad as the whole world and wanted her whole womanhood on that platform. As now accepted, she said that the term woman simply stood for an unknown quantity, while the most erratic comets were more easily assigned orbits than woman a sphere. She had appeared on every page of the world's history, walking with man from the beginning and keeping pace with him. And here she carefully waded through some of the more interesting chapters of past ages, showing the frivolities of man as contrasted with the virtues of woman. One hundred years ago she was regarded for her beauty and accomplishments, no respect being had for her virtue and honor. But it is encouraging to see how much progress has been made since then. Men are now ready to open for woman new avenues of industry, and to "allow" her to enjoy greater liberty. Civilization—the best interests of humanity—wait for her; but not till she is herself will she ever be what she should be or do what she can do. But now the age is listening to the demand of woman—to be a woman, not a puppet. None but a woman knows the needs of woman, and no man has a right to be a woman she also has a right to frame the laws that shall govern her. The man who attempts to enforce his definition of a woman is a tyrant. Her sphere cannot be defined by accident. She must have freedom to do well whatever she can do and to act in the sphere where she can make herself most useful. To this end she must have a more finished and practical education. Her time for this and will be the future. She demands the highest culture and must have it. She must have the inspiration of a larger career than is expressed in the word dress. Her right to be a woman includes also the development of all her powers. It is the right of every woman to be beautiful. Intelligence is the elixir of youth and illumines the plainest face. Her right to be a woman also includes her right to do her share of the world's work. The fact that God made woman and man was not made for man alone, or man for woman alone, but both for each other. It is not true, and never was, that woman's nature has ample scope under men-made laws. In concluding her remarks she again said that her right to be a woman laid on her a most solemn obligation—to know how great a responsibility rests upon the mothers of the age. But she must belong to herself if she is to be true to this obligation. In illustration she said the right of the drunkard's wife to be a woman is meant that she should be armed with the ballot to stop the traffic that made her husband a brute. And here she appealed most forcibly to men to assist her to maintain the integrity of her womanhood by investing her with authority to guard her most sacred interests. Her lecture was all along crowded with most eloquent passages that were received with marked expression of applause.

DISGRACE AND DEATH.—On Nov. 4th a warrant was granted by Alderman Walsh for the arrest of Frank Gedney, a carpenter residing at No. 347 Third street, on the complaint of Ellen J. McManus, of No. 386 Eighth street, who charged that Frank was the father of her unborn child. Gedney was arrested, and in order to prevent further trouble, consented to immediately marry the girl, which ceremony was performed by Alderman Walsh. It appears that Ellen's character is by no means spotless, and he does not run that she has lately been tending anything but a respectable life. Two months ago she ran away from home and got into bad company. Her parents, after a diligent search, succeeded in finding their unruly daughter's whereabouts, and sent her to the House of the Good Shepherd, in hopes of reforming her. Two or three days ago, on promising to lead a better life, her parents agreed to take her to come home again. She, on the advice of some of her friends, immediately applied for the warrant of arrest as stated above, and which resulted in her becoming a wife. Ellen's conduct appears to have preyed upon her father's mind, and on the above date, during the temporary absence of his wife, McManus procured a rope and hung himself on a hook over the door leading to the rear basement. His wife, on returning home, was horror stricken at finding his body suspended as above described, and she at once raised an alarm. Dr. Blume arrived in a few minutes, but too late to be of any service, as life was extinct. The sad affair has cast quite a gloom over the neighborhood where McManus has lived for many years, and where he was universally respected by all who knew him. His character for industry and sobriety was of the best. He formerly worked at Wood's Museum, but for some time has been out of employment. —N. Y. Star, Nov. 6th.

TRAGICAL CELEBRATION OF A WEDDING.—At East St. Louis, Mo., on Oct. 31st, Frank Walter was married to a step-daughter of John B. Goetz. Tuesday evening, at the same place, the creaking of the boards of Turner Hall marked the bridal festivities, occasionally interrupted by the performances of several charivari parties, composed of Ignatz Feigenbaltz and other kindred spirits. Some of them were admitted to participation in the dance, but the disappearance of a keg of beer, combined with other annoyances, put harmony to flight, and with it a number of individuals, more mischievious than turbulent. Goetz' house was afterwards visited, and the old man becoming offended and charging that they wanted to set the building on fire, made his exit, armed with a rusty musket, which would not go off. A shower of missiles followed, and Walter, who had gone to bed, sallied out, partially undressed, with a sabre, or as he called it, a cavalry sword, upon which Feigenbatz was impaled while beseeching the bridegroom not to slay him. On Wednesday the question uppermost was who killed Ignatz? A coroner's jury attempted to solve it. Goetz was stated to have declared after the stabbing that the man had got his share. Walter said that he himself was so "tight" that he did not recollect everything that happened, and especially a circumstance about having the sword. Goetz was placed upon the stand, and after his evidence, whether from fear or other motive, Walter asked to be recalled and blurted out that he had come to the conclusion to tell all about it. Feigenbatz had abused him and he retaliated by stabbing him, but had not meant to kill him, and only used the sword when he, himself, was down. The jury accepted his confession and found him guilty. The bride of a day is inconsolable.

DIVORCE AND ADULTERY.—A young man of Pittsburgh, Pa., who filed an application for divorce on the 4th inst., on the grounds of adultery and desertion, got into a tremendous muddle with his dearly beloved. He states that on Saturday evening, after he had filed his application for divorce, she came to his place of business and told him that if he sued her for divorce on the grounds of adultery he should never live to see the day the divorce would be granted. He made an information against her for surety of the peace. He is afraid of her threats. Warrant issued.

OUTRAGE.—On Nov. 4th a negro went to the house of a Mrs. Bass, living near Windsor, Mo., and demanded money; she refused to give it him, whereupon he choked her until she was nearly insensible, and attempted to outrage her person. The negro was arrested on the 6th inst., taken to Windsor, and hanged by a mob.

A WOMAN CHARGED WITH CANNIBALISM.—A negro woman, of highly respectable character, was arrested about Nov. 6th, at Jacmel, West Indies, upon the extraordinary charge of cannibalism. The charge of accusation alleges that she had killed and eaten twenty-six children.

KILLED.—Thomas J. Caldwell, accused of committing a rape, was killed on Nov. 6th, in Giles county, Tenn., while endeavoring to escape from the officers who had him in custody.

TWELVE DIVORCE SUITS IN ONE DAY were acted upon in the Louisville courts last week, and it is stated that Louisville, Ky., is trying to be what Chicago was in that sort of business.

A SCENE WITH THE MINSTRELS.

BONES.—Bossy, I see a great deal just now in de papers 'bout de 'lections. Now, you knows all 'bout de public affairs, and bein' as I was in doubt, tinks I, I'll go to you for information.

INT.—Well, sir, what is it? You have not been after a seat in Congress, too, I hope?

BONES.—O, no, dat ain't in my line. But I see dat de candidates on both sides hab bin canvassing de country, and so, tinks I, I might as well hab a finger in de pie myself; wid dat I makes out my estimate and takes my bid to de Mayor's office and hands it to de gentlemanly clerk, and says he, "what's dis?" "Estimates for canvassin' de city and county of New York." "Dat'll take a good deal of canvas, but, however, you can sail in," says he. Well, I begin by coverin' up my own back yard wid sail cloth, so's to make a start, but would you believe it, when I hand in my bill, he told me de folks mus' canvas de county at deir own expense, and said I mus' be a goose not to know dat.

INT.—He probably thought to make a canvas back duck of you. But you should have thought of all dat before undertaking so serious a job as a canvas. Canvassing the county, you know, means drumming for votes, and the clerks were merely quizzing you.

BONES.—Very well. Den de nex' time I wants a office, I'll get a drum and go to de cross roads wid it. By de way, you didn't know I run for office once.

INT.—Indeed.

INT.—You made a narrow escape of it, Bones.

BONES.—I say, bossy, I want to know if dis am right. I went in yesterday to a broker's office to get my pay for some work, an' he ask me, "why'll you take it in?" and I said "hard cash." Wid dat he paid me off in a package of counterfeit samples, and when I went back to git it made right, de chap had cleared out and de shutters was up. So I went to de magistrate, and when ne heard me troo, says he:—"You asked the man for hard cash, and I tink you got it, very hard cash!"

INT.—And I think so, too.

INT.—What! with counterfeit money?

BONES.—Yes—I—s, a bully farm, I tell you, full of bulls and cows and hosses and tings. Me and a friend worked it on shares. I went off one day wid de gun to de a little huntin', and he went to work in de field. Den he went to work in de field a spell and I went off huntin'.

INT.—It appears to me that was six of one and half a dozen of the other. What kind of shares did you work it on?

BONES.—Why, fifty-fifty. But I neber shot nothin' but once, when I took aim at a bird in a tree and blowed a frog out of a duck puddle under it. De birds dey knew I was soft hearted, and used to sit on de toppermost rail of de fence and wink at me while I took a'm. Den I stock de farm wid sheeps, and geese, and cows, and pigs, and hosses; but de geeses used to fly at me whenever I come near 'um, and de dog he eat up all de sheep and de geese, and top off wid de chickens, and de cows dey ate up all de sweet potatoes and tings, and de hogs he eat up all de sheep and de geese, and top off wid de chickens, and de cows dey ate up all de sweet potatoes and tings, and de hogs he eat up all de corn and de cows dey ate up all de weeds and thistles, and my partner entered into a deed of separation—

INT.—So, so; a deed of separation?

BONES.—Yes; he cut hisself in two wid a mowin' machine, and dat end de business.

INT.—Truly, a climax! And now suppose we have a little music.

CHARMING IDA VANE.

At the twilight's gloaming, when the stars on high
One by one come peeping through the amber sky,
And the distant river, lighted by their ray,
Seems bestrewn with diamonds in incessant play;
Underneath thy lattice, sweetest Ida Vane,
Wails thine ardent lover in the dark'ning lane.
Chorus.—Sweet Ida Vane,
Charming Ida Vane,
For thy steps I'm waiting,
Waiting in the lane.

In thy latticed casement burns a beam of light,
Where in my little lady sweet I see thy the night,
Wrapt in balmy visions; angels from the skies
Waft her gentle spirit up to Paradise;
And in dreams she whispe s secrets I would fain
Hear by her repeated in the dark'ning lane.
Chorus.—Sweet Ida Vane, etc.

In my heart there nestles one surpassing face,
And a form of beauty blent with every grace;
Lips so vermil'linted, cheeks so like the rose,
And her voice so soft, gladly I'd oomes and go,
Like the faint, spice odors born of summer's reign,
While I watch thy casement, waiting in the lane.
Chorus.—Sweet Ida Vane, etc.

One day, little lady in your ivied pl'e,
You and I'll be walking slowly up the aisle;
While the organ's music peals in notes of joy,
Hymns that seem to echo love without alloy;
And in tones impressive as the organ's strain
Resounds the prayer that makes me one with Ida Vane.
Chorus.—Sweet Ida Vane, etc.

INT.—Very pretty, indeed. Now, Bones, let us hear your views on the Presidency.

BONES.—Why, I'd run for de office myself, but I'm afraid I'd get beat. Dey'd say I'm not a native born citizen, and dat I'm a nigger. Dey'd say I'm not a native born citizen, and dat I'm a nigger. Dey'd say I'm not a native born citizen, and dat I'm a nigger him when all his other relatives turned their backs on him. This is the same person whom the English sporting press expressed a hope would take up, with his horse Hesty, the challenge to run Harry Bassett in this country, in the event of Mr. Gretton, the owner of Sterling, declining to bring his horse over here.

DEATH IN THE HUNTING FIELD.—An accident, which terminated fatally on Oct. 23d, occurred to the Rev. Reginald Yorke, curate of Powick, near Worcester, Eng., about Oct. 19th. The deceased was out hunting with the Worcestershire hounds, when his horse swerved while crossing a fence and rolled over him, injuring him fatally.

BASE BALL.

RULES OF THE GAME FOR 1872.

Now that the season of 1871 is over, the subject of revising the playing rules for the season of 1872 becomes an interesting topic in base ball circles; and as the past season's play has plainly shown the necessity for amending some of the existing rules, it is a matter of important discussion in regard to how far the present rules should be changed so as to meet the requirements of making the game of base ball thoroughly complete as the national game of ball of the country.

The official duty of revising the code of the game for 1872 falls upon the two committees of rules of the amateur and professional associations, the former having to report their amendments at the amateur convention on the second Wednesday in December next, in this city; and the latter at the professional convention to be held at Cleveland, O., the first Monday of March, 1872.

In view of the importance of adopting one code of playing rules to govern the entire base ball fraternity, it becomes the policy of the chairman of the committee of rules of the amateur association—Mr. John Sterling, of the Star Club, of Brooklyn—to prepare a series of amendments to the playing rules of the game, which will be likely to be endorsed by the committee on rules of the professional association—of which Mr. J. S. Evans, of the Forest City Club, of Cleveland, is chairman; for it must be borne in mind that while the playing rules of the game can only affect the pleasure of the amateur fraternity, their bearing upon the professional class affects pecuniary interests, all the regular professional organizations now being incorporated stock companies, possessing considerable monied capital. Therefore it is a matter of importance to avoid amendments likely to conflict in any way with these interests, or otherwise they will be thrown out by the professionals, and then there will be two codes of playing rules in force, something that must be avoided, if possible. We do not see why a playing code applicable and satisfactory to the professional association should not be fully suitable for the amateur fraternity. Of course, we refer only to the mere rules of play, and not to those calculated to govern match making regulations or to affect the intercourse of clubs with one another as in both these cases the rules of the amateur association must, of necessity, materially differ from those of the professional organization. With a view to facilitate the operation of amending the rules, we have concluded to go through each rule of the game as now in force, and to make such suggestions in regard to revision as the experience of the season's play leads us to deem important and necessary.

Beginning with Rule First, governing the ball, bat and bases, we see no need of any change in the first section of the rule, except in reference to naming the quality of the rubber in the composition of the ball, the object being to avoid the difference in the elasticity of balls possessing the same weight of rubber, but having a variable quality. In the case of the difference between the vulcanized or "mould" rubber, and that of the sheet rubber cut in strips, the elasticity of an ounce of the former is not half that of an ounce of the latter. We therefore suggest that the rule should be amended so as to allow only one quality as well as one weight of rubber, the preference, of course, to be given to the non-elastic kind. The size and weight of the ball should be the same as now. The remaining sections of Rule First do not need amendment.

We now come to the most important of all, viz., that governing the pitcher's department, Rule Second. The interpretation of this rule the past season has been very variable, some umpire observing the strict letter of the law, while others have ignored both the spirit and the letter, and been so lenient in their interpretation of the sections governing the calling of "balls" and "strikes," as to allow both the pitcher and the batsmen a license which the rules were neither intended to warrant nor legally admit of. The first section, which refers to the pitcher's position, needs no change in its wording, nor does either section 4, describing "unfair balls;" section 5, describing balking and its penalty, or section 7, referring to the called balls. Sections 2, 3 and 6, however, need re-wording in order to make a fair interpretation more clear to the average mind than now seems possible. While there can be no doubt in regard to the necessity of having every unfair ball—as described in section 4—called in the order of its delivery, it is a matter of question in regard to what power the umpire shall possess in deciding upon balls pitched within what may be regarded as the fair reach of the bat, and yet not pitched the height called for, or so that the striker can fairly hit them to advantage. For instance, no one will deny that it should be the duty of the umpire to call every ball, in the order of its delivery, which is pitched so as to strike the ground in front of the home base, or so as to hit the striker while he is standing in his regular position, or such as are pitched over his head, out of reach of his bat, or opposite to the side he strikes from. All such balls are unfair in every respect, and should be called whenever delivered, even if there is no batsman. But the balls which need to be specially referred to in other words than those contained in the existing rule are those which are too low or too high for the accustomed habit of the batsman's style, of which, though such balls are not sent in over the home plate In considering the re-wording of the sections governing this point, it must not be forgotten that the interests of the game require that the pitcher should be allowed sufficient license for strategical play, or, otherwise, one of the finest points of the game will be sacrificed. In other words, we want to get rid of wild and reckless pitching by rigid penalties, and to keep pitchers down to a legitimate exercise of skillful play in their position. To do this by a proper amendment of this rule is the problem the two committees we have referred to will have to solve.

We now come to Rule Third, which governs batting. Section 1 needs no revision, but section 2 will have to be amended to harmonize with such changes as may be made in the rule governing the pitching; such, for instance, as that which refers to the distance from the ground which distinguishes a "low" ball from a "high" one. Section 3 requires no change, but section 4 does, as it especially refers to the act of refusing to strike at fair balls. As in the case of inflicting the penalty for delivering "unfair" balls, there should be no doubt in regard to the right of punishing the striker for refusing—from any cause—to strike at really fair balls. It should be also borne in mind that, if the striker be allowed the privilege of calling for balls to suit him, he should be promptly punished for not striking at such balls when delivered to him, and also for striking at balls not sent in as he calls for. Thus the season's play has shown numberless instances of batsmen calling for low balls and yet striking at high ones and vice versa. Now the rule should provide that if the striker avails himself of the privilege of selecting a ball he should be required to adhere to his call, and, in case of his failure to do so, every ball should be regarded as "fair" which comes within his legitimate reach. A much needed amendment to this rule is one which shall give the striker out whenever he strikes at the ball with the sole object of causing the catcher to pass the ball, so that the player on first base, or any other base, may get a base or a run on the passed ball. This unfair play has been indulged in this season with impunity, and yet no gamer infringement of the rule prohibiting the obstruction of fielders in catching a ball has been committed than this self same habit of striking at the ball without any design to hit it fairly. Section 5 requires no amending.

Next comes Rule Fourth, governing the running of the bases; the majority of the sections require no change of wording, but sections 9 and 10 need revision. First, in regard to the right of a base runner to a clear way to the base. Experience has plainly shown that while the base runner should be allowed all free access to the base he is running to which the circumstances of sharp fielding will admit of, there is one thing he has no right to do, and that is to run in the way of a fielder catching a flying ball. Under all the circumstances of a base player, a short stop or a catcher fielding a ball to put out a base runner, there is no questioning the equity of the base runner's claim to a clear way to his base; therefore, in the rule which decides the base runner as "not out" in case he is in any way prevented from reaching his base by a fielder while in the act of fielding a thrown ball to put the base runner out, is a good one, and the penalty a legitimate punishment of unfair play. But in the case of a fielder running to catch a fly ball from the bat, it is equally unquestionable that the fielder in this instance is legitimately entitled to the right of way, and the rule should be so amended as to give the base runner "out" who in any way, while in the act of running the bases, prevents the fielder from catching a fly ball from the bat. In the case of the thrown ball the base player can readily run in a little and take the ball and thereby avoid obstructing the base runner; but in the case of an attempt to catch a fly ball from the bat the fielder has no option but to get under the ball, and in doing this he cannot possibly get out of the base runner's way if the fly ball should happen to be falling on the line between the bases. The fielder, therefore, is, in equity, entitled to the right of way in this case. In regard to section 10, which refers to the new rule of overrunning the first base, a new wording is undoubtedly required. Indeed, the question has been discussed in reference to applying this rule to all the bases. Whatever may be the merit of this addition, there is no doubt of the fact that the rule should be worded as to require the base runner to return and re-touch the first base when ever he avails himself of the privilege of overrunning the base. The necessity of his doing this, in all fairness to the field, is this:—when he overruns first base he escapes being put out by being touched when off the base. Now if in so overrunning the base he should turn to the left instead of keeping straight on in a line with the foul-ball post, he thereby gains ten or twenty feet on his way to second base; and in so doing, should the ball not be handled properly, his chances of reaching second base through the privilege of overrunning first base would be in his favor in eight cases out of ten. It will therefore be seen that in such a case he would be given a double privilege. Now, by causing him to return and touch the base a second time, he is prevented from taking the unfair advantage of getting half way to second on the overrun. This is but an equitable offset for the privilege of escaping being put out while off his base. We would suggest, therefore, that the player, every time he chooses to avail himself of the privilege of overrunning the base, should be required to either turn to the right—his best plan—or to keep straight on, and in either case he must return and retouch the base; and he should be fined or in some way deprived of the privilege of overrunning the base with impunity. The new rule has worked most advantageously in preventing sprained legs and ankles, and we question whether it would not be well to apply the rule to each base. We find that our comments are at such length as to require another article to cover the whole code of rules.

THE KEASBEBEE BASE BALL CLUB, of Stoneham, Mass., at a recent meeting, voted to correspond with all amateur clubs, of Massachusetts, to see if there cannot be something done to get up an interest among amateur clubs. It is proposed that each club pay into the association the sum of $5, to be used for the purpose of getting up a good prize, to be played for by amateur clubs during the season of 1872, under rules similar to those governing professional clubs.

THE PROFESSIONALS OF 1871.

In resuming our comments on the professionals of 1871, we come to third base players, a position the most difficult of the three on the bases to play well. Some of the hottest and most troublesome balls to field are sent towards third base, besides which the high foul balls which fall near this position are the most difficult to hold of any which come from the bat, owing to the great bias imparted to them by the bat. Then again, the third baseman has the shortest time left him to gather for a throw, and the longest distance to throw to first base of any in-fielder, while he also has more strategical points presented to him to play well than any of the in-field positions; for these reasons the third base is the most arduous of any in the field, excepting those of the pitcher and catcher.

Naming the professional third basemen in the alphabetical order with which we started, we first come to Anson, of the Rockford Club. We never saw him in a match until this season, and then only in a few games, and we know nothing of his antecedents; but in the games in which we did see him take part, he impressed us as a very strong player. The Athletics entertain this opinion, also, for Lucy have, it is said, engaged him as their third baseman for 1872. In two of the games played on the Union Grounds Anson made some splendid stops and throws, and also several fine catches. He bears a good name for faithful and efficient service.

Next on the list is Bellan, of the Haymaker nine, a plucky player, a reliable man and a good worker.

We have also to name Ferguson in this position, and we regard it as the best he plays. Ferguson is remarkably quick in putting the ball on players running to third, and he is wide awake in playing points. He and Pearce worked beautifully together in the majority of the Mutual games at third and short, and the players in both positions need the assistance of each other in playing them up to the mark. Fergy made some splendid stops and swift and accurate throws to first base during September and October, and likewise some difficult catches. In fact, he is one of the few third basemen who have excelled in the position during 1871.

Third base has always been a weak point in the Athletic nine, and the past year was no exception to the rule; Meyerle, though a good general player, not being up to the necessary mark in "head-work" in playing third. He has shown good play at times, is a faithful, square player, good natured, and always tries his best; but when it comes to critical play in a close and exciting contest, Levi gets a little bothered, and he is not always there when wanted, in strategy. Otherwise, he may be relied upon for good service. His batting record is very good.

We now come to John Nelson, of the Eckford Club, whose fielding skill was a great feature, he being up to a high mark. But his reputation as a gentlemanly and honorable member of the professional fraternity we cannot refer to in praiseworthy terms. His propensity for fault finding is an infirmity which greatly mars his success and efficiency as a fielder, and is a demoralising element in a nine which no wise club manager will allow to exist in his organization, for no matter how skillful a player you crowler may be, he offsets it by his continual fault finding to such a degree as to entirely prevent the quiet and unobtrusive fielders from doing justice to themselves. A fine player, who has that infirmity of temper, may be borne with in the hope of reformation; but, a player who forgets himself so far as to insult an umpire, and lays himself open to more serious charges, is unfit to occupy any position in an honorable professional club, no matter if he were a second Creighton in point of playing skill.

The third baseman of the Chicago Club next claims attention. Pinkham has not been a well man this season, and, therefore, has not been able to make as good a record as he is able to. Being a left handed player, he is, of course, out of position in any place in the in-field except that of first base and pitcher. Pinkham, when in trim, is a fine fielder, especially when playing in the pitcher's position, but, like Pike, his right place is in the out field. He is a plucky player and does faithful and earnest work in a nine, no matter where he plays. As a left-handed pitcher, with a lenient umpire, he has been at times quite effective. In the Chicago nine he has never been allowed to make any one position a home one, the newspaper managers of that unfortunate nine having caused him to be transferred from third base to the out field and back, like a shuttlecock.

We now come to the man whom we regard as the best third baseman of the season, viz.:—Sutton, of the Cleveland Club. Like others of that nine, Sutton has proved true to the club he first earned his reputation in, and if anything adds to the capital of a professional player, it is fidelity to his club. While it is quite legitimate for a professional to seek the highest pecuniary reward for his services, there are circumstances when it is vastly more profitable to remain in a club nine for a less salary than can be secured in another nine, and when this becomes the result of a local feeling of regard for a player's old club, it enhances the value of the services. Sutton excels in all the essentials of third base play. He is a swift and accurate thrower, a good judge of his batting adversaries, faces the hottest balls fearlessly, is a sure holder of twisting foul balls, well up in strategical play, and a hard, earnest worker from the first to the last innings in a game, no matter how great the odds may be against his side. He is also very effective in making first base hits, a great criterion of skillful batting.

Charley Smith—the veteran third base player of the fraternity—opened play as third baseman of the Mutual nine, but a very severe mental illness required him to withdraw for the season in August. We are glad to learn, however, that he has fully recovered, but, it is stated, that he will not again play ball, unless the old Atlantic Club is re-organized. It is unnecessary to comment on Smith's ability—he is too well known; suffice it to say that for years he has been the champion player in the position, and but for sickness and trouble would have still maintained his high reputation for fielding skill.

Schaffer, of the Boston nine, is next on the list, and like other third basemen of the season we know of, he is not at home in the position. He has, however, shown some fine play in a majority of the games, but in others he has been lacking in critical points. During the latter part of the season he was partly disabled by rheumatism. In fact, the Boston nine had hard luck as regards the disabling of their players; Geo. Wright's lameness costing them half their defeats. Schaffer is an out-fielder, and very strong there, too; he has a good record for earnest work and reliability, and has been re-engaged for the Boston Club.

Next to the last on the list is Fred. Waterman, of the Olympic Club, one of the old Red Stocking party, who ranks high in the position he has occupied for so many years, he being, next to Smith, the oldest third baseman among the professionals of the season. Fred is a hard worker, and plays finely when he does not get his dander up; but when things go wrong in the field Fred gets put out, and when he does he frequently forgets how to put out his opponents.

Williams, of the Kekiongas nine, is the last on the list, and of the few times we have seen him play he has shown himself to be a first class fielder. We do not know him well enough, however, to comment fully on his characteristics. When the season's averages are published we shall be able to judge more of the ability of him and others whom we can but now make brief mention of.

A YOUNG LADY WINS A WAGER.—QUICK WORK ON MAKING LADIES BOOTS.—$1,000 TO $500 AGAINST THE LADY.—An instance of quick work, by which pretty profitable wages were earned, has come to our knowledge, which we think worthy of public mention, the names of the parties being withheld by request. Not long since there was employed in one of the large shoe manufactories in this city a young lady whose duty it was to fasten the taps and soles of ladies' boots together, preparatory to lasting. This is done after the tap and soles are dinked out, by first pasting and then securing them by two nails. One day a gentleman was in the manufactory where she was employed, and observing her celerity of movement, raised a question as to how many she could prepare in one day. One of those having the management of affairs expressed the opinion that she could do twenty cases in ten hours. The gentleman first mentioned could not credit this, and offered to stake one thousand dollars against five hundred that the feat could not be accomplished. The wager was accepted, the young lady made acquainted with the facts and asked if she could do it. She replied that she was willing to try, provided she should have a share of the money should she win. This was agreed to and the task was commenced. At twelve o'clock on the next day she had eleven of the twenty cases finished and packed ready for the taster, and at ten minutes inside the ten hours the task was competed. The incredulous gentleman paid the wager of one thousand dollars, and the winner handed the young lady five hundred of it. This, together with the sum earned by doing the work, made pretty fair wages for one day, and any one can see by a little calculation that she had to keep pretty busy. There were in each case sixty pairs, four pieces to a pair, making two hundred and forty pieces of leather to handle, and as many nails to be driven. In the twenty cases there would be forty-eight hundred pieces to take care of in ten hours, which was done; thus averaging four hundred and eighty per hour, or eight in one minute. This is an actual fact and the smart girl is at present doing a snug little business of her own in the central portion of our city. If this can be beat, bring along the one who can do it.—Lynn (Mass.) Reporter.

DEATH OF A TIGER HUNTER.—"A sad gloom," says an Indian advice, "has been thrown over the community of Bolarum by the melancholy death of Capt. R. F. Doig, 2d Regiment Infantry, Hyderabad Contingent, from the effects of wounds received from a tiger on Sept. 8th. On the Monday previous he succeeded in killing a fine male tiger, about six miles from cantonment, and at the same time found there was another at the same place. On Friday, about midday, news of its having killed a bullock that morning was brought him, and he at once rode out to the spot, unaccompanied except by his own shikarees. He soon found, and had rather a long shot, and was under the impression he had hit the beast in the head; but it was the opinion of himself and those with him that the tiger had got off and left the place. He at once commenced to organize another beat in a different part of the jungle, and whilst doing this was suddenly, and without warning of any kind, sprung upon and very severely bitten by the infuriated beast. So sudden and unexpected was it that poor Capt. Doig, although an experienced and cautious sportsman, said he never even saw the beast until he was on the ground and being bitten, or, as he expressed it, 'calmly eaten.' After the accident he rode back to cantonment, but he never recovered from the severe shock and lingered only until Tuesday morning, when he quietly passed away, remaining sensible almost to the last. Thus has been lost a gallant soldier and one of the keenest and best sportsmen in the country."

AN ARTICLE ON COPYRIGHTS. Thackery, on his first visit to New York, was introduced to a very fashionably-dressed young lady, the daughter of a publisher noted for his piracy of the works of British authors. "Ah," murmured the novelist, "a splendidly bound edition of 'The Pirate's Daughter.'"

SHORT RACE COURSES.

Underneath we present a communication from a Philadelphia correspondent upon the subject of scant courses, which will be perused with interest by all rowing men or admirers of the art, nearly all of whom, we are confident, will coincide with the views therein expressed. The evil alluded to is a crying one, and it behooves the amateur boating men of the country, as also the principals and others directly interested in professional contests in future, to have the course to be rowed over accurately surveyed by a competent person and the stakes and boats properly placed, otherwise time made will go for nothing. Our correspondent takes occasion to refer to the recent regatta of the Hudson Amateur Rowing Association as a case in point, and a better he could not possibly have cited (though the instances are plentiful), for from the astonishing record given out by the judges for several races upon that occasion, it is manifest that either the time had been incorrectly taken, or the course rowed over fell far short of being three miles in length; for this reason we refrained from mentioning the time given out in our report of the regatta, knowing it was not correct. The judges were men who understood their duties, but they certainly failed to perform them in thus reporting time which they must have known was incorrect. And yet our sporting contemporaries published the time as given, without comment, thereby not only exposing their own ignorance or carelessness, but helping to deceive the public. We trust that boating men in all parts of the country, professional and amateur, will adopt measures next season to remedy this evil. Read the following:—

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6th, 1871.

MR EDITOR.—In these days of chronographs and short distances, it is, as matters now stand, totally impossible to say that this man or that man has made the best time ever recorded on this course or that course—or even that Johnny is able to beat Jimmy's time of a year ago. The trouble is, Mr. Editor, that the length of race course, in general, decreases every year, and as the same course is never pulled over twice, all recorded time and comparisons based thereon are worse than useless. There is no reason for this in professional foot races; there certainly is not with amateurs. If the distance pulled over in the various regattas of amateur oarsmen, on the Schuylkill, Hudson, and, in fact, any other water of the Union is correctly given in the annals of the respective rowing associations, there are dozens of amateurs who can run away from such feeble oarsmen as Brown, Hamill, Coulter and Mekeel—for don't they beat professional time all to bits? Your humble servant, himself, is credited with better time than Walter Brown's! Why is it thusly? In a report of the scull race of 1870, on the Schuylkill, in which your correspondent took part, you took occasion at your correspondent's expense, very properly, too, to hold up to ridicule the assertion that any amateur or even professional should have made 3 miles in 20 minutes. Your correspondent was there, pulled in the race, and knows that the distance was not quite 2¾ miles. The course pulled over or rather walked over by Mr. Lavens on Sept. 30th, '71, was also short; otherwise Brown's time would have been beaten and Coulter nowhere. I'm afraid Harry will refuse to be shelved thus suddenly, but after all, it's only his time that's beaten. But, Mr. Editor, how is it about the Pleasant Valley Course? Am I to understand (the record of the distance and time being considered correct) that Mr. Deely, in rough water, can beat Hamill's time by a minute, the latter's time made on a course acknowledged the "smoothest" in America? Or that Mr. Englehart, in a working boat, beat H's time by 36 sec.? The ways of "regatta committies" are unaccountable, and the record of distances as the shifting sand—but not quite equal to the latter. Short courses are objectionable for another reason; they tend to make a competitor "pull his insides out" (for a short race, too), as the whole race is nothing but a prolonged spurt. Under such circumstances, all style must go to the wall; and as for decent rowing, why that's now out. Besides there is the danger of capturing a blood-vessel. For these reasons, Mr. Editor, I hold that it should be the endeavor of all amateur rowing associations to give the proper length to race courses, and not cut the distance down to make the time appear better. For although professional time has been beaten (so-called) no professional of any standing has been beaten, even by the best of amateurs, and for this reason:—Everything requires practice, even rowing; and rowing, easily learned as it is, is enough of an art to make constant practice necessary to perfection, and few amateurs have the time or the means to devote themselves fully thereto.

Yours, etc., NAVIGATOR.

NASSAU BOAT CLUB.—The annual election for officers of this metropolitan club was held on Nov. 8th, which resulted as follows:—President, General Charles Roome; vice president, Frank G. Brown; captain, T. Grinnell Willis; coxswain, Jason H. Miller; treasurer, Charles Myers; secretary, J. D. Freeborn; trustees, Frank W. Bacon, John C. Babcock, George A. Frink and Henry Almy. The club numbers 103 members.

ANOTHER DEATH IN THE FIELD.—A sad accident occurred on Oct. 24th, with the Tichborne hounds, by their master, Mr. W. Rigden, of Faversham, being thrown from his horse on his head and killed instantaneously. It is said of himself that "he was one of the old school, a hale and hearty Kentish squire, who knew how to handle his hounds and to treat his field with courtesy. In him Kent has lost a fine old sportsman and hunting men a most popular master."

PREPARATIONS FOR SKATING the forthcoming season are being made in Boston, Mass., for on Monday, the 6th inst., the skating association known as the Boston Ten held their annual meeting for the election of officers, which resulted as follows:—President, H. Smith; secretary, Mr. Brigham; treasurer, G. S. McNeal. They intend to lease some vacant lot, and have it enclosed as a skating park, as their rink has been occupied as a market.

EVERY plain girl has one consolation—though not a pretty young lady, she will, if she lives, make a pretty old one.

Wilson, Geo. E. (2)

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Nov. 13th, '71.

"Thing₈ is checkered," as an improbable "young fellow" was heard to exclaim the day succeeding our election; "and," continued he, "somethin' must be wrong, or yer can't make out who's got ii any more'n yer can tell chalk from cheese." A good many people were unable to make "it" out, although the contest, which was peaceable and decorous to a degree, was witnessed by a large and an appreciative audience, and hundreds of women were turned away, unable to gain admittance, owing to the boxes being crowded with the more important element of manhood. "Things was also checkered" at the theatres while the election and its mysterious cyphering up were going on during the week just closed, and money flowed not in an unceasing stream through the loopholes of the gate that lead to the treasury department; but anon, the welcome current will rise like a small tidal wave and overwhelm with gladness the prismatic countenances of our rejuvenated managers. And so, having closed our election accounts, we relapse into our usual serene frame of mind and enter upon a season of gayety, frivolity and dissipation generally.....Some people have a curious idea as to what constitutes jocularity and laughableness, if we may be permitted to introduce a new word into the late Mr. Webster's extensive collection of words. We have before us a copy of a Philadelphia paper of a recent date—and it isn't a religious paper, either—and right under the editorial head is a collection of divers items called "Fun of the Hour," and among the notices which make up this solemn column of fun is a very affecting notice of the death of a daughter of Mr. E. L. Davenport, the well-known actor, as follows:—"Mr. Davenport has met with a heart-breaking affliction in the death of a sweet and dearly-beloved child. These terrible visitations come to every one—to the king on his throne, the beggar in his hut. All we can utter is—God help us!" And all we can say in response is "Amen," for if any one is in need of help it must be the writer who classifies as "fun of the hour" the decease of a dearly-beloved child.....It is against our discipline to make game of a brother in distress, but "Our Jim" has no such compunctions of conscience. It was only on Saturday last that a song and dance man called to see James, and while enjoying the latter's hospitalities, the artist complained that he was suffering greatly, his gums were so sore and swollen. And what do you think was the reply of this dreadful boy? Says Jim—"If your's got sore gums you better use a little sorghum molasses on them".....The Vienna female orchestra doesn't seem to get along very harmoniously in their travels. Their manager is a little too obstinate, and the young ladies have just as much as they can do to manage him. In Milwaukee—what's the matter with Milwaukee, any how?—there's always a row or something going on there—a number of the girls wanted to cut on the director, and hoe their own row. What does the terrible Rullman do, but interpose an objection, and that made more trouble. We don't know how it will end. It is difficult to say who has the worst of it, the female orchestra in trying to manage Rullman, or the latter in his efforts to control the females. Poetry:—

The female-fiddlers once believed
A bright man was this Rullman,
But now they've changed their tune, and say
They think he's quite a dull man.

.....Once in a while, when "off color," as it were, we go into the highways and byways, and take a look at the other side of humanity. Once in a while we enter a school room, and hear "fun by the hour"—real fun, so to speak, for the reading of adolescent youths and virgins is often made very ludicrous by their uncouth renderings, amusing blunders and unlooked for twisting of words from their original into the most fantastic readings. James usually accompanies us on these missions. In a class of seven-year old boys one unregenerated little fellow, whose turn it was to read a sentence, blurted out:—"If a man compel thee to go with him a mile, go with him twenty." Jim wanted to know whether the boy was a champion walker. Once we had to laugh like we had been eating persimmons. A boy who prided himself on his elocutionary abilities arose to read this verse:—"And Herod laid hold on John." Imagine the effect on the risibles of the teacher, when the lad thundered out: "And Herod said hold on, John!" Jim said he didn't see anything to laugh at, and we don't believe he did—where ignorance is bliss, etc. A young reprobate, just on the eve of our late election, and filled with political reform, probably, read as follows:—"For John came unto you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not, but the re-publicans and harlots believed him." "Them repubs isn't such hard lots after all," remarked Jim, who hasn't a very clear idea of scriptural readings. The blunders of the girls are equally amusing. Some day we'll expose them a little.....We perceive that "La Grand Duchesse" is to be given at Lina Edwin's Theatre, "for one week only, by general request." This is rather tough on the grand duchess, is'nt it?.....We went to the circus last week to see the show. We like the circus; it reminds us of old times so much. "Our Jim" is another admirer of the circus—has been a sort of boy once, in a sawdust show, and ever since that he brags of his connection with the circus profession. He knows 'em all, from a to izzard. James went with us to see Mr. Lent's exhibition. We delight in seeing the ladies ride; there's a joyousness about their equestrianism that intoxicates the senses with delight. Lucy Watson was to be among the riders, the programme told us. Our sight is not quite as clear as it was when we used to go to the circus, so we said to James, "Jimmy, is Lucy Watson out yet." "Yes," replied the enthusiastic and frivolous boy, "that's Lucy standin on the horse."..... "James, a few lines of poetry about the circus may not be out of place here, to relieve the solid appearance of the matter." "You want 'em pitched into? Do they owe yer anything?" "No, no, James, the circus boys are good fellers." "Scorter put 'em up, a bit?" "Well, you might let Jemima have her own way for her head's level. I believe." "I wish everybody's was as level. Start her?" "Easy, boy."

THE CIRCUS.

We love to see the circus show,
With horses prancing round,
And lovely women on their backs
When falling on the ground;
We love to see the circus ring
Filled up with gymnasts proud,
We love to hear the circus ring
With plaudits of the crowd.

The clown, his funny jokes to tell,
Will all our hearts with joy,
But if he "ghost" should fail to "walk,"
"How are you, James, me boy?"

"Jimmy, she seems to have got off the track." "She does 'pear a little out of jint, I 'bleve." "Have you greased her lately?" "I grease her every time you grease me, yer know. Pepils can't work right without wages, yer know, onless yer in with the chaps what's got the funds for the relief of the suffrin' show folkes of Shoecargo. That's the damdest frord that ever came over. There's Ned Forrest, and Ned Booth, and Lost. Wallack, and the Elks, and Margret Mitchell and the rest of the boys sent out barrels of chips for the poor show pepil, but somebody that aint a poor show pepil has got it, probly, and the boys is hungry and sleepy too. 'If ever I seese to luv,' it'll be when we catch the man what's got the funds; if he does'nt disgorge soon, hangin' to the lamp post what Barney Aaron teasn't hung at will be his portion. Stealin from poor sho folkes is wuss than lyin, by a dam site!" "James, be profanity. Remember, we are endeavoring to fasten the crime on the guilty embezzlers; when we have succeeded in so doing it will be time enough for you to be a little demonstrative." "Well, now, don't you think it a dam shame, hay? Don't you think a man what'll stele from Sheecargo sufferers wood set a sitty on fire? Hay? Damddont, shure!" "Put the machine up, James; we must send her to the committee of seventy to be reconstructed."..... Good may come out of evil—it often does, and nobody objects; but it is sad to see evil spring out of good. There is nothing better than charity, and yet evil has recently originated in charity; for of the proceeds of the various benefits for the sufferers of Chicago that portion intended for the theatrical people seems to have passed into the hands of a party who, up to this time, have given no account of it, and it is shrewdly suspected that they are using it for their own benefit. Thus the pro-ceeds of charity have sown the seeds of discord among a deserving class.....Peanuts, as our commercial reports would say, are scarce, but this is groundless, evidently; for at a concert the other evening there was a quart etl, by four persons, in quick time. (We should, perhaps, casually remark that in the quart ett lies "a joke in a nut shell."—ED.).....And talking about peanuts, and places where they have a habitation and a name, to speak in flowery language, reminds us of a little story, to the relation of which we beg to call your careful and undivided attention. The old Customs Theatre, now numbered among the things of the past, was, in its day, a high old place, where the boys could spend a night quite comfortably when they could not obtain a lodging elsewhere. They used to have a stage manager there who could get up pieces at short notice, and he always prided himself on having them acted to the life, as you will understand; and on one sensational occasion could invent anything in the way of mechanical novelties, no matter how complex, that he couldn't produce the material for; ialling bridges, mountain passes, railroad slaughters, these were his hobby. The actors say —though we believe the allegation to be false—that when he failed for novelty to put upon the boards he had recourse to an old barrel, in which he kept his stock pieces, and put on the first three or five that he fished out; and as the company knew every piece in the barrel there was no necessity for study, and a change of bill could be given nightly without taxing their mental faculties. Three dramas and two farces would be a small modicum for a benefit night, allowing the audience an opportunity of an early breakfast between the pieces. Arduous as his duties were, this manager never let an opportunity for an anecdote or joke to escape. On one occasion, a gruesome piece, "armed with banners," etc., was the grand attraction; the apses, under their noble captain, were marching through the centre door of the jailer's office in Sing Sing prison, and making their exit at the "first entrance right," the stage manager watching their evolutions while the prompter was holding the book. "Stop, stop, come back here," shouted the manager, springing to his feet, and pounding the table emphatically, while his stentorian voice rang through the empty building—"that ain't right. If any of you haven't been in states prison, there'll be plenty here to-night who have!" He then proceeded to explain the proper method of marching with lock step as practiced in prison. After the rehearsal had been resumed, the stage manager remarked:—

"There's nothing like having this little business right. I recollect during the excise war I was stage managing down in New Orleans, and we were playing a military drama which was in great favor with the volunteers and the citizens who were enthusiastically in favor of the war. One scene, which gained more applause than another, represented the drumming out of camp in disgrace of a recreant soldier, the music playing the while the accompaniment of the 'Rogue's March.' I was sitting in the box office one morning during the run of the play, when a soldier stopped at the window and inquired for the stage manager. He would probably have received an unsatisfactory answer but for my presence, for treasurers are bored all day long by ambitious authors and amateur actors, who wish to interview the stage manager. Being invited in, the young fellow was not long in making known the object of his visit.

"'I have been to see this play of yours,' he said, 'and like it first rate; but there's one thing wrong.' I asked further explanation, and he went on to say:—'No one ever saw a soldier drummed out of camp the way you do it.'

"'How do you know?' I demanded, at his presumed superior knowledge, and judge of my surprise, when he remarked, very coolly:—

"'Well, I think I ought to know, I was drummed out of camp myself last week.'

"The ex-soldier then followed with explicit directions as to how it should be done, and I acted upon his suggestion to the worthy's complete satisfaction.

"The public demand realism in the drama, and even the marching of 'prison birds' and the ignominious drumming out of camp of a poltroon soldier should be pictured to the life."

City Summary.

Notice to City Managers, their Treasurers and Doorkeepers.

We have recently ascertained that certain parties have been imposing upon our city managers by representing themselves as being connected with the CLIPPER, and seeking free admission and other favors on the strength of such alleged connection. We shall feel greatly obliged to managers, their treasurers, doorkeepers, etc., if they will hereafter refuse free admission to all such parties. The gentleman detailed to report as to what is going on at our theatres, halls, etc., is well known, and he will exhibit his credentials where required to do so. Should we find it necessary to send others, they will pay their way.

MISS POLLY DALY, serio-comic vocalist; Misses. Marie and Leontine, dancers; Miles Morris, Irish character songs; the Garnella children, acrobats and gymnasts, and George Warren, banjo performer, were the new appearances at the Theatre Comique during the past week. Miss Daly possesses considerable dash and vivacity, and she sang a number of songs which pleased the auditors. Her costume was rich and tasteful, her voice clear and powerful, her figure good, and these, combined with her dancing, constitute of a pretty face, more than counterbalanced any slight defects apparent in the method of her singing. Miles. Marie and Leontine, clad in Polish costume, performed, during the course of the divertissement of "All Nations," a double dance which met with favor. Mlle. Albertina also continued to appear therein as the premiere danseuse. Miles Morris was a triple encore for singing in an effective manner some Irish songs. George Warren's songs, with banjo accompaniment, although well rendered, possessed no novelty and fell flat with the audience. The Garnella children, two in number, one a boy of some seven teen years of age, and the other a tiny fellow with flaxen hair, performed some acrobatic feats, which evinced skill and careful training, and, later in the evening, they gave some clever performances on horizontal bars, which drew forth much applause from the audience. Miss Ada Wray continued to appear during the week in songs with banjo accompaniment, and Miss Jennie Hughes won much applause in a new selection of songs capitally rendered. Johnny Wild and Charley White made things lively while performing in various Ethiopian sketches; Kitty O'Neil won favor by her jig dancing; Connor and Bradley were also to advantage in songs and dances, and a sketch called 'Lost at Long Branch" closed the programme. For the present week those excellent performers, Delehanty and Hengler, will be the chief feature.

AT THE SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS, those popular performers, Birch, Wamboldt, Bernard and Backus, are pursuing the even tenor of their way in the most placid manner possible. Their average business is good, and, we doubt not, their weekly dividend of the profits offers each of the partners a fair remuneration for their labor. Their auxiliary aid is ever first class, and during the present season unusual effort has been made by the managers to present as much novelty as possible. The programme of the past week was enjoyable, but calls for no special comment.

MISS OLIVE LOGAN delivered her new lecture, entitled "Nice Young Men," for the first time at Steinway Hall, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 8th, before a large audience. Among the graphic descriptions of the various kinds of nice young men we may allude to the following:—The young man who is indispensable at balls and parties, whose manners are beyond reproach, but whose morals may be of the worst description; Miss Japonica's nice young man, whose attire is of the most exaggerated description, and of the greatest importance to himself; the funny young man, who retails stale jokes and old conundrums; the stupid young man, who, in his attempts to imitate the funny young man, ever fails; the solemn young man, who sees nature only in a funereal garb; these, with others, were handled by Miss Logan in a piquant style, and her lecture may be pronounced a success.

AT WALLACK'S THEATRE, on Monday evening, Nov. 6th, "A Curious Case" and "The Critic; or, A Tragedy Rehearsed," were acted. On Tuesday Taylor's comedy, in one act, entitled "A Nice Firm," was substituted for "A Curious Case," and, together with the "Critic," formed the programme for the remainder of the week. "A Nice Firm," is a series of complications arising from the business incapacity of the principals of a legal firm. Mr. Moon, one of the partners, has a very bad memory and misplaces papers of value, is slow and p oddling; while Mr. Messiter, the other partner, is all dash, jumping at conclusions hastily, and involving the business of their clients in great confusion. Mr. Moon was admirably acted by Mr. John Gilbert, and Mr. Messiter suited Mr. Charles Mathews' peculiarities. The remaining characters, though having but little to do, were well performed. Of Mr. Mathews' performance of the dual characters of Sir Fretful Plagiary and Puff we have already written. The balance of the cast affords but little scope for acting, but in the rehearsal of Mr. Puff's tragedy of the "Spanish Armada," Miss Effie Germon, as Tiburina, and J. H. Stoddart, as Whiskerandos, by their excellent burlesque acting created much merriment. The attendance during the week was not large. This evening, Nov. 13th, Mr. Lester Wallack makes his first appearance during the present season, acting Elliot Grey in "Rosedale," which is announced to be re-produced with all the original effects.

MISS KITTY LE ROY, jig dancer, and W. J. Bailey, concertina performer, were the fresh appearances at Tony Pastor's during the past week, both of whom, in their respective lines, afforded satisfaction to the audiences. Miss Ki a Saunders, a pleasing serio-comic; Tony Pastor, with fresh comic songs; Sam Devere, in banjo solos; Celia Herd, in songs and sketches; the Misses Gorenflo, Jennie Eagan and Josie Farran, in dances; Peter Cannon, in Irish patter songs; Frank Kerns, Johnny Queen, J. A. Graver and H. W. Eagan, in Ethiopian sketches, made up a programme which apparently gave much satisfaction to those in attendance. A new sketch called "Uncle Snow; or, the Old Plantation," in which nearly the entire company appeared, closed the performances.

THE GLOBE THEATRE will be opened for a season this evening, Nov. 13th, under the management of Harry Cunningham, who will produce Charles Foster's drama entitled "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl of New York," which has not hitherto been acted on the Broadway side of the city.

JAMES DE MOTT, manager of Sheridenburgher's Menagerie and Circus, has been in New York the past week, with his wife, visiting places of amusement and having a good time generally.

D. W. HOUGHS, advertising agent for Van Amburgh's Menagerie, arrived in this city last week.

MISS FLORA WALLACK, the daughter of Mr. John Lester Wallack, was married in this city Nov. 8th, at the church of the Transfiguration (the "Little church around the corner,") by the Rev. George H. Houghton, to Mr. Arthur L. Sewell, of this city.

THE ALMOST UNPARALLELED SUCCESS achieved by P. T. Barnum's Museum, Menagerie and Circus during the present season which has just closed, will naturally stimulate our citizens with a desire to personally witness the manifold attractions which created such a sensation among our country cousins. And when it is known that numerous attractions will be added to that exhibition, consisting of rare curiosities, a large collection of animals, but seldom witnessed here, and many noted equestrians, acrobats and gymnasts, and other features too numerous for us to attempt to particularize, we opine that the Rink, at the corner of Third avenue and Sixty-third street, will be largely attended. On this evening, Nov. 13th, which will be the opening performance, Mr. Barnum will be present and address the audience.

A GENERAL DROPPING OFF in the attendance at all the places of amusement in the city was visible on Monday and Tuesday evenings, owing to the excitement attendant upon the election.

MARTIN PERCY ROSELLE continued to act during the week in the "Boy Detective" at Wood's Museum at the evening performances and Saturday matinee. So great has been his success that he has been engaged to continue during the present week. At the usual matinee performances Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hall continued to appear in H. J. Byron's burlesque of "Acis and Galatea," which was preceded by "Faint Heart Never Won Fair Lady."

"DIVORCE" completed the tenth week of its representation at the Fifth Avenue Theatre on Nov. 11th. During the past week, between the acts, Mr. J. Levy, the renowned virtuoso on the cornet-a-piston, performed some choice musical selections, which were received with much favor. A special matinee is announced for Thanksgiving day at one o'clock, when "DIVORCE" will be performed.

IT IS A PLEASANT TASK to record, week by week, the success of "Humpty Dumpty" at the Olympic Theatre, because such success is based upon the excellence of the performance and the sterling merits of the performers. Besides two acts of pantomime, in which G. L. Fox, as clown, and C. K. Fox, as pantaloon, nightly vindicate their claims to be ranked among the best performers in the world in that line, there is presented a melange entertainment consisting of a ballet by the excellent Kiralfy Troupe, Hantois, Imre and Bolossy being conspicuous therein, with other divertissements in which M'lles Alexandrowa, Moriondo, Pagliori and Despa, as premieres, displayed their activity to satisfactory advantage. The whole is a delightful musical entertainment; Signor Casselli performs upon the "invisible" wire; Young Adonis and Little Venus disport themselves upon bicycles; Little Jennie Yeamans enchants the juveniles by her pleasing character songs, and the Parisian grotesques win much favor in a fantastical dance. The beautiful scenery is a potent attraction, and the characters in the opening, impersonated by Mrs. Yeamans, the Misses Prior, Flora Lee, Melnotte, H. Naylor, and the Messrs. De Barnum, George, A. Beantyson and Atkins, deserve commendation. It is announced for continued representation.

MR. SOTHERN continues successful in his original creation of Lord Dundreary, in "Our American Cousin," at Niblo's Garden. With the exception of the early part of the past week, when the election excitement interfered with the attendance, an excellent business has been done, and we donot during the present engagement, any change in the programme will be necessitated.

MISS CHARLOTTE STANLEY remained at the Bowery Theatre during the week, appearing in Mr. Stanley McKenna's local drama, entitled "Crime; or, The Secrets of a City Life," which was preceded by "Aunt Charlotte's Maid." An entirely new drama, from the pen of Lewis F. Stoller, entitled "Searching the Depths; or, The New York Detective," is in active preparation, which will shortly be produced with freshly painted local scenery.

THE SINGING OF THE OLD TIME BALLAD of the "Old Kentucky Home," was one of the most attractive features upon the programme at Bryant's Minstrels during the past week. It was introduced in the closing sketch entitled "Uncle Eph's Dream," and was sung by the entire vocal corps of that minstrel hall, and had the aid of appropriate scenery and surroundings. The balance of the programme was made up of familiar acts, many of which had not, however, been performed for some time. They were all well performed, and therein Dan Bryant, Neise Seymour, J. W. McAndrews, Little Mac, Dave Reed, W. H. Brockway, W. H. Rice and others were seen to excellent advantage.

D. W. HOUGHS, who, during the past tenting season, was an avant courier of Van Amburgh & Co.'s Great Golden Menagerie, under the manage ment of Henry Barnum, arrived in town during the past week.

MR. AND MRS. W. J. FLORENCE, having succeeded in postponing an engagement in a neighboring city, which was made some time since, will remain at the Grand Opera House for two weeks longer, during which time they will continue to act in "Rosedale," in which, by their excellent performance of prominent charcters, these artists have added to their popularity and enhanced their artistic reputation. At the expiration of the time above alluded to, Mr. T. C. De Leon's new drama, entitled "Paris; or, The Days of the Commune," will receive its initial representation. At the usual Sunday evening concert, Miss Blanche and Mr. L. Gaston Gottschalk, vocalists; Mlle Ostella, violinist; Mr. Carl De Tery, violoncellist, and Mr. J. Levy, cornet a piston, assisted the Ninth Regiment Band in a pleasing performance.

THE THESPIAN SOCIAL UNION, is the title of a new amateur dramatic association recently formed in this city, and parties wishing to join it can address as per advertisement.

AT THE CIRCUS, in Fourteenth street, Mr. L. B. Lent has collected a most excellent company of equestrians. The performances of the past week commenced with what is termed in circus parlance an "entry," which was denominated "The Italian Cavaliers." Succeeding this George E. Levantine gave a very clever performance called "The Magic Barrel," which was followed by an equestrian act by Charles F. Reed, during the pauses of which D. A. Seal, the clown, amused the audience with a series of witty remarks, which were fresh and novel, and during his portion of the performance we did not hear a stale jest. Signor Ferrandi then performed an act called "Muscular Contortions," which differed widely from the performances usually given under that title. He is graceful and agile, and possesses great skill for acrobatic feats, while the suppleness of his figure is wonderful. We can unhesitatingly pronounce him one of the best performers of his class that has ever appeared in this city. Miss Lucy Watson and F. Hanlon then performed a double equestrian act, after which the Joe Brothers, attired as jesters, gave a pleasing musical performance upon blocks of stone transversely laid upon small circular sticks of wood, which, being struck with wooden sticks, emitted harmonious sounds, while the skill displayed by the performers is deserving of high commendation. Later in the evening they gave an extraordinary exhibition of hat spinning. The Levantine brothers in their performances upon the horizontal bar deserve creditable mention. Miss Lucy Watson, in a principal equestrian act, displayed grace, skill and daring, while her performances were not marred, as is too often the case, by any failure to accomplish at once the intended feat. During the usual intervals her performances allotted to the clown, Mr. E. Almonte appeared as such, but exhibited no original traits, although he amused the audience. Acrobatic feats by the principal male members of the company, which were performed without the customary plank "run," evinced much careful training and skill. During these feats Charles W. Fish turned six consecutive back ward somersaults, and later in the evening, upon a Roman backed steed, performed an equestrian act which deserves the highest praise, his forward and backward somersaults being particularly excellent, while his vaulting over "banners" and through "balloons" was accomplished with ease and grace, which drew forth loud plaudits from the audience. An extravaganza called the "Clowns' Cavalry," in which E. Almonte was the principal figure, concluded the performances. The attendance has been excellent, and appears to indicate a successful season. "La Jeune" Burt, hurdle rider, is announced to appear this evening. A matinee performance for the benefit of the Chicago sufferers is announced to be given Nov. 29th.

RUBY HUGHES, as he was professionally known during his performances with Mr. Hogan in double songs and dances upon the minstrel stage, but wh se real name was James Lang, died in Jersey City Nov. 10th, of consumption, and his remains were buried from his father's residence at the corner of Fifty-sixth street and Seventh avenue on Sunday, Nov. 12th, the lodge of B. P. O. of Elks, representatives from the Keystone lodge, F. and A. M., large numbers of the profession and personal friends attending. He was an excellent performer, and, if we mistake not, in conjunction with Mr. Hogan, was one of the first to introduce the double song and dance in the American public. He was formerly connected with Bryants' Minstrels.

GEO. AND WILLIE GUY, variety performers, have been engaged to appear at the Thirty-fourth street theatre, in this city.

BEN MAGINLEY, who has recently arrived in this city, announces in another column that he is prepared to accept an engagement for the winter season. He is an excellent actor and has proved himself a favorite during his previous engagements at our principal theatres.

W. B. FRELIGH has arranged to play Miss Charlotte Stanley in the neighboring cities in Stanley McKenna's successful drama, entitled "Crime." The tour will be commenced at Paterson, N. J., Nov. 13th.

GEORGE E. WILSON was in this city on a flying visit today, Nov. 13th.

THE BURTON DRAMATIC ASSOCIATION, an amateur organization, many of the graduates of which have achieved success upon the regular stage, gave a pleasing and successful performance at Terrace Garden, on Nov. 9th. Mr. T. C. Faulkner, who, for twenty-one years has been an active and efficient member of this society, is to receive a complimentary benefit during the present month.

MISS MARIAN FISKE desires us to state that she acts soubrette and boy characters, and not juvenile business. Many managers have confounded her with Miss Mary Fiske. Therefore letters intended for her should be addressed with the full name. She is the daughter of M. W. Fiske, the comedian, and is at present engaged at the Grand Opera House in this city, although not cast in "Eileen Oge."

HY. CUNNINGHAM, dramatic agent, 636 Broadway, inserts in another column a list of artists in different branches of the variety profession, who can be engaged through his agency, and we refer managers in search of talent to his card.

MANAGERS are referred to Col. T. A. Brown's advertisements in another column, through whose agency Chas. Rogers, Russian gymnast; J. C. Campbell, who appears in his specialty of "Pomp," and Ella Wesner, who will not be at liberty until April 8th, 1872.

EPH HORN, the veteran minstrel performer, is to take a benefit at the Olympic Theatre on the afternoon of Thursday, Nov. 16th, when he will have the assistance of many minstrel performers in this city, and we trust that a large attendance may be present.

AT THE ST JAMES THEATRE, during the past week, Señorita Palomeno, pianist and violinist, was the only addition made to the company. Her performances were artistic and pleasing, being received with evident satisfaction by the audience. Miss Susan Galton, aided by Mr. Kelleher, Mr. Arnold, and others, performed in two petits operas entitled "SIXTY-SIX" and "La Rose de Saint Fleur." E. D. Davies continued his excellent ventriloquial performances, the dialogues being considerably varied nightly and interspersed with telling hits at local topics. Miss Annie Lonsdale will shortly return to the stage, and will appear at the St. James, supported by a dramatic company. The Saturday matinees are rapidly increasing in popularity, and the attendance of ladies and children has been quite numerous.

MRS. G. C. HOWARD is announced to play Topsy in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," at the Harlem Music Hall, on Nov. 17th, supported by a dramatic company under the management of H. G. Clarke.

Dramatic.

To Managers, Agents, Doorkeepers and Others.

Every regularly authorized correspondent of the NEW YORK CLIPPER is supplied with the necessary credentials, in the shape of a card, with an engraving of the CLIPPER Building on one side, and on the other the name of the correspondent, city, etc., signed by the proprietor of the paper, with the stamp of the office, and date of Sept. 1st, 1871, affixed thereto, each card running for six months, when new ones will be issued on the return of the old, but one representative being recognized in each place. We particularly request that managers of entertainments will decline extending favors to any person representing himself as correspondent of this paper who cannot produce the card referred to. By acceding to this request, managers will not be imposed on by irresponsible parties. Cards are only issued to correspondents of the amusement department of this paper. Parties applying for the position of correspondent are specifully requested to consider silence a negative.

MISS LEONA CAVENDER made her bow to a Leavenworth, Kan., audience on Nov. 6th, appearing in the character of Minnie Rook in John Brougham's sensational drama of "Minnie's Luck." Our correspondent, writing on Nov. 8th, says:—"The lady was greeted with a full house and was well received by the audience, being called before the curtain twice and awarded frequent and hearty applause during the evening. Miss Cavender was well supported by Stevens' Dramatic Company. John A. Stevens, as Horace Fryor, was excellent. T. R. Hann, in the character of Meichezedeck Maggs, had a fine conception of the part, and played it in a manner highly creditable to himself. Thomas E. Jackson, as Inky Dick, divided the honors of the evening with the star, and made a decided hit. Harry Hobbs as Mrs. Willoughby, acsingh assigned to a minor part, played with her usual correctness. Miss Cavender remains here this week and opens in St. Joseph, Mo., on Monday, the 13th, for six nights, and goes from there to Omaha."

THOMPSON commenced an engagement at Richmond, Va., Nov. 6th, appearing in "On Hand." Our correspondent, writing on Nov. 11th, says:—"He is decidedly the best card of the season, and is greeted nightly by good houses. His versatility is remarkable. The same bill was recreated on the 7th, 8th and 9th. On the 10th, 'The Wandering Dutchman' was produced to a full house, for the first time on any stage. As Hans Von Hicklespragen he was excellent. The same piece will be repeated to-night, and at the matinee 'On Hand' will be performed. Mr. Thompson has been most satis factorily supported by the stock company. On Nov. 13th, Nell Warner, supported by Miss Grace Rawlinson, will commence an engagement."

AT BUFFALO, N. Y., at the Academy of Music, during the past week, Thomas G. Riggs has acted in Poole's drama of "Shin Fane." Our correspondent, writing on Nov. 11th, says:—"He has been playing to fair business, the Celtic element being especially well represented in the upper tiers. The play possesses several good points, and affords Mr. Riggs ample scope for displaying his artistic abilities. He makes a capital Irishman, assuming the brogue and peculiarities with all the naiveté of a native of the 'ould sod.' The subordinate characters are rendered up to creditable manner, eliciting applause. The company gave fair support. Mr. Mordaunt, as Pierce Curran, acted in his usual happy style, portraying the honest peasant to the life. Mr. Wright gave full justice to the part of Martin Doyle. His make-up of itself revealed the villain. Miss Waugh's Ellen Curran was a beautiful picture of the loving wife. Miss Thompson as Molly Sullivan, was acceptable. Mrs. Hodges gave the characters of Betty Roach and Mrs. Prior justice. R lowing plays were presented with Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Davenport in the leading characters:—"The Wife," "St. Mars" and "The Stranger," the latter being presented on Saturday evening, the 11th, in conjunction with the comedy of "The Honeymoon." This week's programme will consist of "St. Mars" and "La Gladiateur" on the 13th inst.; "Everybody's Friend" on the 14th inst.; "Damon and Pythias" on the 15th inst.; "The School for Scandal" on the 16th and 17th insts., and "The Colleen Bawn" on the 18th inst.

FOX'S AMERICAN THEATRE, Philadelphia, in addition to its usual varied features of attractions, presented the following novelties last week:—Miss Annie Adams, vocalist; J. H. Milburn, vocalist; George Murray, Dutch comedian, and Signor Frances, juggler. Mr. J. H. Milburn failed to create as favorable an impression as he did on the occasion of a previous engagement, perhaps owing to the fact that his songs lacked variety. Signor Frances performed a clever juggling act, and George Murray appeared to much advantage in his Dutch songs and dances. The Majiltons, as usual, elicited great applause in their wonderful and grotesque evolutions, and their benefit, on the evening of the 10th inst., attracted a very large audience. Mons. Leopold and Mlle. Geraldine went through some surprising feats on the trapeze. The ballet corps, one of the best in the country, disport themselves to much advantage in the ballets of "Pas Melange" and "Coral Nymphs," in which Mlle. De Rosa appears in some of her most graceful and artistically executed solos. The performance highly concluded with the serio-comic pantomime of "Robert Macaire," with Alex. Zanfretta and James W. Wesley in the principal characters. The Majiltons concluded their engagement on the 11th inst., as also did J. H. Milburn, Mons. Leopold and Mlle. Geraldine, and Signor Frances. On the 13th inst. Miss Helene Smith, danseuse and vocalist, and Ed Banker, in his lightning changes, will make their re-appearance. And the following will make their first appearance here:—Lillie and Zoe, gymnasts; W. H. Maurice, in his protean act, entitled "The Mystic Changes," and Signor Vayo in his imitations of birds, insects and animals.

JOE JEFFERSON will appear in "Rip Van Winkle" at Welting Opera House, Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 16th, 17th and 18th, under the management of the Meech Brothers.

THINGS THEATRICAL in San Francisco are thus reported by our correspondent "Sir Toby," under date of Nov. 8th:—"'Kit' proving unexpectedly attractive, its representation was continued at the California Theatre until the evening of the 3d. The drama holds up a mirror to a life many in this section at some time have been made acquainted with; to this and to the refreshing novelty others find in the characters and scenes depicted which blend much that is strange, rude and picturesque, may be traced the reason of its thorough success. Mr. Chanfrau has decided to incorporate the original points and stage business introduced by Mr. J. C. Williamson in his clever picture of the dandy nig Julius Cæsar as a portion of the character in future productions. The spark of originality Mr. Williamson displays should under anything favorable auspices brighten into a genuine dramatic flame. 'Hidden Hand,' splendid as a type of a flashy literature wherein existence is given natureless characters which are antithetically contrasted by the allottment of exaggerated virtues, followed the withdrawal of 'Kit.' If it was not for the dash and beauty of Miss May Howard's Capitola, the character and humor of Chanfrau's Vidocq, and the explosive jolly voice of Edward's Wardeid, it would be a vexation of spirit to give any notice of the play. The fourth and last week of Chanfrau opens 6th with the old-time Olympic success, 'Mose; or, A Glance at New York in '48,' with Chanfrau as Mose, and Minnie Walton as Lize; 'Debutante,' with Chanfrau as Achille Taima Dufard, Mrs. Sophie Edwin as Arabella, Minnie Walton as the Debutante; and 'Rough Diamond,' with J. C. Williamson as Cousin Joe, and May Howard as Margery.....Mr. Robert McWade has appeared in a variety of characters at the Metropolitan Theatre to tight business. His efforts in the Hibernian line have been better appreciated than they were in his favorite specialty of Rip Van Winkle. He commenced the week, Oct. 30th, with 'Rory O'More' and 'Dutch Richard.' The cast of the former included McWade as Rory O'More, J. H. Hardie as Sir Shan Dun, J. H. Vinson as Weiskin, H. Colton as De Lacy, John Woodwards as Scrubbs, R. Graves as Colonel Thunder, Geo. Hinckley as Solomon, Sallie Hinckley as Kathleen, Fanny Young as Betty, Susie Soule as Mary O'More, Mrs. Frank Rea as Widow O'More, and Miss Ada Deares as Nelly Riley. On Nov. 6th, 'Ireland As It Was' took the place of 'Rory O'More' on the bill, but the acting was of a kind not calculated to instill new life into that piece of dramatic antiquity. Miss Maggie Moore, who played Judy O'Trot, requires a rigid schooling under an elocutionist. A knack of talking fast hardly constitutes humor. Miss Moore is young, and ought to have plenty of opportunity to correct obvious faults and rid herself of a slangy air, doubtless insensibly acquired from speaking early in life in variety halls. Harry Colton, who displays a tendency to be unnecessarily lugubrious, and revels in an inordinate use of the pocket handkerchief, should be careful how and when he assumes a tearful voice, and altogether dispense with an acquired habit of audibly gasping for breath between each sentence he speaks. On the 2d, Mr. J. H. Vinson acted Haversack in the 'Old Guard,' which was given in addition to 'Ireland As It Was.' On the 3d, 'Rip Van Winkle' was revived, for the benefit of Robert McWade, and now remains the attraction. The dramatic entertainment on and after Nov. 1st, was supplemented by the songs of Chas. Vivian, who announced this as his farewell engagement prior to his departure for Australia, on Nov. 8th. Next week the attraction will be Broughan's drama, 'Lotterys Life,' with Vivian in the concert room scene. James Ward opens with 'Through by Daylight,' Nov. 13th.....Mr. John McCullough leaves town, 6th, for Virginia City, to fulfil a two weeks' engagement at Piper's Opera House. He is to play Iago, Hamlet, Richard, Richelieu, Yolage and Damon, and will be supported by Mr. James Carden in the opposite characters of Othello, Ghost, Richmond, De Mauprat, Phidias and Pythias. Messrs. Owen Marlowe and Edmund Leathes, of the California Theatre, will also support Mr. McCullough, in addition to the regular company at the Opera House.....Mr. Oliver Doud Byron arrived by the overland route, Oct. 30th, and is devoting his time to the getting up of 'Across the Continent,' which he produces at the California Theatre, Nov. 13th.....Mr. Frank Rea has resigned his position in the company at the Metropolitan Theatre."

AT THE OPERA HOUSE, Utica, N. Y., the Forresters produced the "Colleen Bawn" on the 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th inst, to crowded houses. Our correspondent, writing on Nov. 12th, says:—"Mrs. Forrester's personation of the Colleen Bawn, and Mr. Forrester's of Hardress Cregan, was very fine. Miss Bertie Smith as the Colleen Bhawd, Mrs. Henderson as Mrs. Oregan, Mr. G. W. Reed as Kyrie Daly, J. Sawbrook as Father Tom, and J. Wilkes as Mr. O'Moore, were successful in their respective characters, but at times seemed to forget that they were enacting an Irish drama by omitting the brogue. Mr. Henderson as Miles-na-copaleen, G. J. Maddox as Danny Mann, and Louisa Watson as Sheiah, kept the audience in good humor. The piece was well mounted, and the scenic and stage effects were excellent.....On the 10th inst., was produced 'Satan in Paris,' at the matinee on the 11th, the 'Colleen Bawn' was repeated, and in the evening the 'Jibbenainosay' and the 'Two Buzzards' were performed."

AT THE HOLLIDAY STREET THEATRE, Baltimore, Md., writes our correspondent, on Nov. 12th:—"Edwin Adams opened Monday, Nov. 6th, in Farquhar's glorious comedy, 'The Inconstant; or, Wine Works Wonders.' Mr. Adams as Young Mirabel, presented a capital performance of acting. Miss Rosa Rand, as Orianna, acted her part with precision; Miss Olivia Rand, as Bizarre, deserves commendation. Both of these ladies were handsomely costumed. The 'Inconstant' was repeated on Tuesday. On Wednesday evening 'Enoch Arden' was presented, with fine scenic accessories. Thursday and Friday 'Enoch Arden.' Saturday night, 'Richard III.' Business was good throughout the week. On Nov. 13th, Brougham's drama, 'The Red Light,' will be produced."

FROM ST. LOUIS, Mo., we have advices concerning dramatic affairs, dated Nov. 10th, as follows:—"Miss Jane Coombs and company at DeBar's, have thus far met with the worst encouragement, considering that her support throughout by the company traveling with her is far superior, with one exception, to any we have had in here this season. A highly perceptible increase in the audiences since the opening night is worthy of note. For their initial performance, on Nov. 6th, 'London Assurance' was presented, followed on Tuesday by 'Love's Sacrifice;' Wednesday, 'The World of Fashion;' for Thursday, the 'Hunchback;' Friday, the 'School' for Scandal;' for the matinee, 'Love's Chase,' with the 'Widow Cheerly,' for Saturday evening's bill. The company will continue here for one week longer, when they will be followed by Miss Matilda Heron and the return of the regular stock company. During the evening of Nov. 4th, when the performances were for the benefit of Mr. Jones, the treasurer, he was presented with an elegant silver service, and in reply to the presentation speech made a few appropriate remarks which the audience enthusiastically received.....At the Olympic, 'Amy Robsart' has been the attraction of the week, with Mrs. D. P. Bowers sustaining the title role, with J. B. McCollom as the Earl of Leicester. The play was handsomely mounted, new scenery being especially prepared for the occasion. All went on smoothly and well until the night of the second repetition, when J. W. Hall met with a slight accident by sprahing his ankle so severely, in his (as Varney) descent through a trap, as to prevent him from appearing the next evening. The part was, in consequence, assigned to Mr. Geo. Morton, who, on having to assume so lengthy and difficult a part on such short notice, was necessarily quite unhappy in the lines, though his make-up was praiseworthy. Indeed, all things considered, Mr. Morton acquitted himself very creditably. Mrs. D. P. Bowers to-night plays in 'Guy Mannering' and 'The Jealous Wife.' For the matinee 'Amy Robsart' will be repeated, with to-night's bill for the evening performance, which will conclude the lady's engagement here and mark the departure of the regular stock on their southern tour. McKee Rankin and his company will open next Monday, the 13th inst."

"PAUL AND EMMET" have drawn crowded houses at the Trimble Opera House, Albany, N. Y., during the past week, writes our correspondent, adding:—"The drama remains the same as presented last year. Mr. Emmett retains most of his old specialties to the amusement of the public. Little Susie Goodwin was especially engaged for the piece as Little Paul. 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' was given for a matinee on the 8th. Miss Lelia Ellis, as Topsey, made a great hit. Susie Goodwin, as Eva, met with a hearty welcome. The other characters were well sustained. Friday evening 'Carl, the Fiddler' was produced for the benefit of Mr. Emmett. On the 13th Mr. Chas. Matthews opens at the theatre as Mopus in 'Married for Money.' and Caleb Plummer in 'Cool as a Cucumber.'.....Miss Kate Raymond, a new star in this quarter, opened at the Capitol Theatre on the 6th, in a new sensational drama, by Thaddeus W. Meighan, entitled 'Waifs of New York; or, The Young Detective.' The attendance has been fair. The full company was in the cast. Mr. J. J. Riley aired his new suit. He did an Irish jig in excellent style, for which he was honored with an encore. Mrs. Mary Mitchell Albaugh and Mr. J. W. Albaugh open on the 13th in 'Mustache Baudin. Mr. Egles, the machinist, deserves creditable mention for the excellent working of the double railroad train."

MYERS & HUNTLEY'S dramatic company performed in Waterville, Me., Nov. 6th, 7th and 8th; Skowhegan, 9th, 10th and 11th, and is billed to perform five nights at Bangor, commencing the 13th; thence to Belfast for three nights.

JOHN KRUGER, the father of Jacques Kruger, pantomimist, died at East Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 4th, of consumption, at the age of sixty-eight years. When a young man, Mr. Kruger was attached to the staff of the New Orleans Picayune as musical and dramatic critic, and in 1841 he was attached to the Boston Post, in the commercial department. He was an artist of no mean ability, and his portrait of General Jackson obtained a prize over numerous competitors. His funeral was numerously attended, the representatives of the press in Boston and vicinity being conspicuous.

WILSON'S BOSTON THEATRE is the name applied to a dramatic company under the management of Geo. E. Wilson, which is billed to perform at Ellsworth, Me., Nov. 10th, and remain six nights; thence to Bangor for one week, and Gildtown for a like period.

NEIL WARNER commenced a week's engagement at the Fifth Avenue Opera House, Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 6th, concerning which our correspondent, writing Nov. 10th, says:—"During the week he appeared in the following of 'Virginius,' 'Richelieu,' 'New Way to Pay Old Debts,' 'Macbeth' and 'Othello.' He assumed the principal roles in all of the above pieces, and acted them with more than ordinary histrionic ability. He has a correct conception of these characters, a dignified stage presence, and his reading and elocution are quite creditable. Miss Grace Rawlinson, a pupil of Mr. Warner's, who acted with him, is very pretty, and possesses dramatic talent, but experience and study are required to develope and mature it. The audiences have been light, entirely too light for the legitimate well played, but the counter attractions have been unusually heavy and numerous in the city this week. J. K. Emmett is 'Fritz' next week.....Mrs. F. Lander appeared as Elizabeth at the Pittsburgh Opera House on the 6th inst. to a fair attendance. 'Elizabeth' was re-produced on the 7th, and on the 8th and 9th 'Marie Antoinette' was presented, with Mrs. Lander in the title role. Both as Elizabeth and Marie Antoinette, Mrs. Lander was the true and thorough artiste. Frequently her power and versatility in the portrayal of passion and pathos, electrified her auditors, and drew forth tokens of unequivocal delight. 'Mary Stuart' will be given on the 10th, for Mrs. Lander's benefit. James H. Taylor and J. Gotthold afforded efficient support. The attendance for the week averaged fair. 'Elfie' will be presented next (this) week, by the stock company, and the Parepa-Rosa Opera Troupe open for one week, on the 20th inst.....Lydia Thompson and her fair coadjutors are doing a 'land office' business at the Academy of Music, this week, under the management of Mr. V. E. Beamer. The capacious theatre has been crowded every night. 'Blue Beard' was given on the 6th, 7th and 8th, and on the 9th and 10th, 'Lurline' was the attraction. Lydia Thompson is as bright and sprightly as ever, and her acting is heartily relished as heretofore. Beckett and Edouin get rounds of applause, and richly deserve it, as they are both capital comedians. All the burlesques given were presented in the best of style, as regards costumes and scenery, and the large audiences were delighted. 'A Day in Paris' and 'Lurline,' will be the bill on the 10th, for Miss Thompson's benefit."

AT CLEVELAND, O., Joseph Jefferson opened at the Academy of Music on Nov. 6th, for six nights and one matinee in "Rip Van Winkle." Our correspondent, writing on Nov. 10th, states "that the auditorium has been crowded nightly. The support rendered by Martin Golden as Derrick Van Beekman, Cockles by John Ogden, J. J. Collins as Nicholas Vedder, Gretchen by Mrs. Effie Ellsler, was excellent, while the children performers, one of whom by little Nellie and Hattie Irving, the former as Hendrick Vedder and the latter as Meenie Van Winkle, were very pleasing and deserve much credit. Louis F. Barrett as Hendrick Vedder was very natural and effective, and Miss Effie E. Ellsler met with a warm and hearty reception as Meenie Van Winkle, which she portrayed in a graceful and lady-like manner, winning much praise. Her business has been extremely good. Mr. C. W. Couldock, an old favorite, opens on Nov. 13 h."

CHAS. WYNDAM'S DRAMATIC COMPANY opened at Detroit, Mich., on Nov. 6th, with "Progress," followed on Tuesday by "Ours;" Wednesday, "School;" Thursday, "Home;" Friday, "Caste;" Saturday matinee, "Caste," and "Ours" in the evening. Our correspondent, writing on Nov. 10th, says:—"Business has been light, steadily increasing since the opening night. Elections having had a depressing effects on all places of amusement. Wyndam has a powerful company and certainly deserves large houses. Jno. Parselle is one of the best representatives of old men, and Mrs. Marie Wilkins of old women, that have ever appeared here. Each member of the company did remarkably well, the honor paying in the hands of good actors and actresses, a pleasure we seldom enjoy from traveling companies. Januschek, broken-Dutch performer, opens Nov. 20th for four nights."

FROM CHICAGO, ILL., our regular correspondent, writing on Nov. 9th, says:—"It is with pleasure we notice the marked improvement that has taken place in the attendance at the Globe Theatre since our last report. Since Monday night last the patronage has been all that could be desired. The small attendance since the opening can be attributed to the sad condition of the building, both on the stage and in the auditorium. The manager is now making a movement in the right direction, and is reaping a corresponding reward. 'Divorce' was presented on the 6th inst., for the first time in Chicago, in presence of an unusually large and brilliant audience. It was a long representation, but the piece was so lively with diverting incidents, and so brimful of rollicking, farcical humor from first to last that nobody appeared to experience a touch of weariness when the curtain finally fell. The dialogue is good throughout, and the situations are contrived with commendable ingenuity. It is placed upon the stage in a most satisfactory manner, while some of the sets are really beautiful. The scenery is from the pencil of Messrs. C. Howard Rogers and De Witt C. Waugh, and is uniformly excellent. The cast is an extensive one, calling into requisition the entire company. As is usually the case, the first night's performance was the occasion for a considerable amount of hitching on the part of several members of the company, but this fault was amended on the succeeding evening, and now the play passes off very smoothly. The costuming, on the part of the ladies, is really superb, each one seeming to outstrip the other in point of elegance and tasteful dressing, it is but justice to say that few pieces have been better and more satisfactorily rendered by any one company during the past season in Chicago. Miss Blanche de Bar's rendition of Fanny Ten Eyck is of a superior order and exceedingly pleasing. Emma Maddern's portrayal of Lu Ten Eyck is a thorough success. Mrs. Kemp is remarkably well rendered by Miss Annie Mortimer. Padgett, Wilson, Langrishe and Martin, and, in fact, the entire company, with one or two exceptions, are entitled to praise for the excellent rendering of their respective parts. There will be no change in bill for the present.....The Jane Coombs four nights' season at Standard Hall, the past week, was not a financial success. The performances were unexceptionably fine, but failed to attract the attention commensurate with the excellent entertainments and the merits of the company..... The Wyndham Company are to put in two weeks at this hall, commencing on or about the 20th.....Mr. Samuel Myers—late of McVicker and Myers—has leased Rice & Jackson's Hall, on West Randolphe street, and will commence immediately to transform it into a dramatic temple.....Mr. W. H. Otis, of the Jane Coombs Company, while collecting relics of Crosby's Opera House, in company with G. W. Garrison, one day last week, discovered a tin box under the corner stone, and upon opening the same found everything intact—the only thing about the building that was not destroyed by the fire.....Among our acts of the past will continue—Where is the money forwarded here for their benefit?"

MISS ETTIE HENDERSON, who concluded a successful engagement at the Park Theatre, Brooklyn, L. I., Nov. 11th, is thus spoken of by the Dispatch of this city:—

Miss Henderson chose for her debut a piece entitled "Far West," written especially for her by Mr. McCloskey. Pieces like most of those from this author's pen, is of the sensation order, but very much better than the generality of such plays. To say that Miss Henderson enacts the part of the heroine excellently well is doing her but simple justice, as she is possessed of a talent of no common order. She is petite in form exceedingly graceful in all her m-vements, has an expressive face, an eye of great brilliancy, and a voice of great sweetness and much power. She is beside an excellent reader.

JOE MURPHY acted at New Haven, Conn., on Nov. 10th. Our correspondent, writing on the 11th, says:—"Owing to the weather being inclement in the extreme the attendance was very light. Mr. Murphy in his impersonations of the different characters incident to the play of 'Help' was immense. His support was fair. Miss Emma Sicard as Eleanor, the discarded one, was very effective. Miss Irene Gay made a very pretty Lillian Waldro. Tracy Randall found a good representative in Mr. Fred. G. Maeder. Mr. C. H. Bradshaw as Amos Wireback gave a very amusing exaggeration of the conventional stage Englishman. 'Help' will be repeated to-night, 11th. The company proceed from here to Hartford, Conn., performing there Nov. 13th and 14th.....The following troupes are announced to appear:—Mrs. Macready, as Shylock, on the 18th; Dupree & Benedict's Minstrels, 22d and 23d; Theo. Thomas' Concert, 27th; the Boston Theatre Company, playing Lotta as the star, on the 28th.

THE VIENNA LADY ORCHESTRA does not get along comfortably, and in Milwaukee an open rupture took place, of which our correspondent says:—"At the conclusion of the last performance of the Female Orchestra, on Saturday evening, 4th inst., eleven of the young ladies seceded from the troupe, declaring their intention of proceeding no further with Mr. Ruffman, alleging that he had treated them unfairly, and had not kept the terms of his contract. After an hour or two's unsuccessful attempts at persuasion, Mr. Ruffman started the rest of the company to Cincinnati, and remained here himself to compel the ladies to accompany him. Up to this time, however, he has not succeeded, the ladies expressing their intention of proceeding directly to Vienna if they can not give concerts in this country as they wish to do, under the direction of Madame Blechachmidt, their former conductress in Austria. Public opinion seems to be largely in favor of the ladies."

THE VIENNA LADY ORCHESTRA gave five concerts at Mozart Hall, Cincinnati, commencing on the 6th. Owing to a split in the company at Milwaukee, there were only about a dozen musicians on the stage. Their repertoire contains the following operettas, now given for the first time in this country:—"The Signal" (Offenbach), "The Soldier's Legacy" (McFarren), "The Widow's Retreat," "The Image" (Gabriel), "Fashion" (Levy), "The Pet Dove" (Gounod), "The Rival Beauties," "The Bride of Song" (Benedick).

S. T. DEAN, business manager of the Chicago City Band, and father of Georgie Dean Spaulding, harpist, and Nellie Dean, the skater, lost everything by the late fire in Chicago, including house, music and instruments. He is at present visiting his daughter, Georgie Dean Spaulding, at Neponsett, Mass.

HENRY APPY'S Concert Company is billed to perform at East Saginaw, Mich., Nov. 14th.

Variety Halls.

To Managers, Agents, Doorkeepers and Others.

Every regularly authorized correspondent of the NEW YORK CLIPPER is supplied with the necessary credentials, in the shape of a card, with an engraving of the CLIPPER Building on one side, and on the other the name of the correspondent, city, etc., signed by the proprietor of the paper, with the stamp of the office, and date of Sept. 1st, 1871, affixed thereto, each card running for six months, when new ones will be issued on the return of the old, but one representative being recognized in each place. We particularly request that managers of entertainments will decline extending favors to any person representing himself as correspondent of this paper who cannot produce the card referred to. By acceding to this request, managers will not be imposed on by irresponsible parties. Cards are only issued to correspondents of the amusement department of this paper. Parties applying for the position of correspondent are respectfully requested to consider silence a negative.

SAM DEVINE, banjoist and comedian, commences an engagement at Baltimore, Md., on Nov. 13th, and at the Thirty-fourth Street House, New York, on Nov. 20th.

S. M. SLOAN advertises for twelve ladies to play brass.

TALENT is wanted for Berry's Theatre Comique, Wilkesbarre, Pa. Address as per card elsewhere.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Wilkesbarre, Pa., the chief features have been Revere and Zeonetti on the flying trapeze; Miss Lidia White, jig dancer; Miss Belle Graham, serio-comic; Miss Nellie Love, song and dance; Billy Wilson, in an acrobat essence; Jake Berry, Ethiopian comedian, and Valentine Love, general performer.

INQUIRY IS MADE CONCERNING THE WHEREABOUTS of Johnny Holden and Miss Nelly Whitney, who were in Chicago, Ill., at the time of the conflagration. Any information may be sent to this office or to Mrs. Charles L. Hall, a sister of Miss Whitney's, residing at Rochester, N.Y.

AT LON CHAPIN'S VARIETY THEATRE, Scranton, Pa., the following company performed during the past week:—Minnie Wah-Wah, Indian female gymnast; Arizona, strong man; Harry Armstrong, Charles Dewey, Master Brooks, Alf. Miles, Frank Carlton, the Misses Belle Lewis, Ada Stewart, Kate Brooks and Victoria Ross.

THE LE CLAIR BROTHERS, gymnasts, who can be addressed care of this office, want engagements.

THE STEVENS SISTERS, Buffalo, N. Y., are performing at the Theatre Comique, Detroit, Mich.

VARIETY CUTS and posters, new designs, can be had of the Great American Printing and Engraving Company, who advertise.

THE VICTORELLI FAMILY, gymnasts, with Annie Victorelli, commence an engagement at Scranton, Pa., on Nov. 20th. Their address is care of this office.

"BLUE EYES AND GOLDEN HAIR," double song and dance, is a composition by J. M. Thatcher, of Nasaville, Tenn., which is coming into favor with our song and dance artists, especially those of the western slope. The music is lively and the words are equally good.

BUSHNELL'S MINSTRELS, of Vicksburg, Miss., continues good. On Monday evening, the 6th, was presented a fine bill. John Collins, in his bone solo was excellent; Thos. Dempsey in his jigs and clog dance, met with favor. As a good actress, Miss Lizzie Lamereaux is worthy of special mention. La petite Hensler and Maggie Louise, in their songs and dances, have proved favorites, as are the Misses Summons and Stewart, while G. W. Bushnell's imitations of prominent actors are well spoken of.

THE WALNUT STREET THEATRE, Kansas City, Mo., is attended by large audiences, the performances giving unbounded satisfaction. There are now four entertainments in one—theatrical, minstrel, pantomime and Lee's California Circus troupe. Charley Armstrong (from Carroll's, St. Louis) made his appearance on Monday night, the 6th, and has already established himself as quite a favorite. Writing on the 8th, our correspondent says:—"The performance this week commenced with the drama (in two acts) entitled the 'Cross of Gold.' The farce of 'Wanted a Nurse,' together with the usual olio of double trapeze by the Lee children; Burgess and his banjo; ladder act and spanish dance by Mr. Lehman; song and dance, 'She Kissed Me Sweet Good Night,' by Charley Armstrong; banjo selections, by Miss Ella La Rue, followed. One of the most interesting features of the entertainment is the astonishing contortions of Mons. Duvernay. Miss Pollie Lee made an ascension on a wire from the stage to the gallery, performing some very clever feats of equilibrium. Ella La Rue and Johnny Pierce have laughable sketch on 'Woman's Rights' and '15th Amendment;' the olio comprises by Bliss and Duvernay; song and dance by Geo. Burgess, and the 'Ku-Klux Band,' by Pierce, Armstrong, Burgess and Master J. Quinn Kennedy, altogether making a fine olio, concluding with the pantomime of 'Robert Macaire,' with Mr. A. Lehman as Jacques Strop, Sig. Bliss as Robert Macaire, Mr. E. M. Hall had a farewell benefit on the 8d, which was largely attended. He has joined the Dearborn party at St. Louis. The Lee family and A. Lehman leave for Texas this week. The new comers for to-morrow night will be Add. Weaver and son, and Miss Nellie Whitney."

AT BROOM'S OPERA HOUSE, Memphis, Tenn., the Canon has been revived with many changes and some improvements, Mollie Bailey's company having replaced the Fraulty. George Melville represents our Cousin-German acceptably, and manager J. W. Berkley, Harry Aldrich, while the African gentlemen are personated by Messrs. Frank Wood, and Charlie Petrie. The other characters are represented by Fernando Fleury, the Misses Millie Coleman, Helene De Vere, Kate St. Leon, Dora Antonio, Millie Rose and Miss Blaine. The performance throughout is varied and sprightly and attracts large and appreciative audiences. The Lawrence Troupe appear next (this) week.....At the Olympic Varieties, Messrs. Oakes and Winnett made their first appearance, Nov. 6th, in a double song and dance, and were warmly greeted The Olympic is now under the management of W. W. Lusk, with Harry Gorman, stage manager, and Prof. Snyder, leader of orchestra. The company embraces many well-known and popular variety people, among whom we may mention Messrs. Tim Hayes, Charlie King, Billie Diamond and Eugene Gorman, the Misses Susie Starr, Carrie Bentley, Joey Ashton, Julia DeLee, Maggie Hunter, Lizzie Florence and Lizzie Buchannan. The Can-can is a leading feature. Susie Starr, the popular dancer, has received her benefit, and Eugene Gorman, with a bouncing boy weighing 14 pounds. So wrote our correspondent, Nov. 8th.

CHARLEY SHAY'S QUINCUPLEXAL TROUPE played at Bangor, Me., 6th and 7th, to a fair business. The Leopar Bros. are artistic performers, and have been well received. Miss Anne and Mr. Harry Marshall in their crystal colums were excellent, as were also Richmond and Hart in their songs and dances. They performed at Kendall's Mills, 8th, and Lewiston, 9th. James Taylor, the London comique, was billed to perform there the 8th, but did not do so, owing to his having received a very painful though not serious accident, by being kicked by his horse in the face, which must necessarily prevent him from appearing in public for some time.

THE WILSONS, acrobats and gymnasts, commence an engagement at the St. James Theatre, Boston, Mass., on Nov. 13th.

J. P. HILL and Maggie Mortimer, character artists, advertise that they can be engaged for two or four weeks.

PESANO, gymnast and contortionist, is at present performing at the Theatre Comique, Detroit, Mich., where he can be addressed.

S. S. SANFORD'S Blonde and Brunette Female Minstrels were the attraction at the Varieties Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., during the past week. Samuel S. Sandford is on the tamborine end, and Fattie Stewart the bone. Tom Hampton is interlocutor. The following ladies appeared:—Misses Kathleen O'Neil, Emma Clair, Fanny Berrie, Maggie Clair, Minnie Chair, Lizzie Shelton, Hattie Ellis and Lucy Chiselop. A very pleasing first part is given, and the olio is thoroughly enjoyable, the principal acts being selections from the Emerald Isle, by Kathleen O'Neil; double contortion act by the Clair Sisters, and Miss Clara Burton's champion jig. Business very good, considering opposition. The week of departure, this week, and the next, who opens at Fox's, Philadelphia, on the 13th inst.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Cleveland, O., the new faces during the past week were Maggie Fielding, Mollie Macey, Burt Wayne, J. W. Sheppard and Joe Moll, who attracted large houses. Pedasio, the "Man Fly" and trapeze performer, is one of the best ever engaged at this place. Joe Moll and Sully Allen, in song and dance acts, are excellent, and Mollie Macy is a comparatively good vocalist; Nellie Austin failed to please; Burt Wayne made quite a hit in his gymnastic song and dance, and the company as a whole is a success. So wrote our correspondent on Nov. 10th.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Detroit, Mich., on Nov. 6th, the new faces were St. George and Kel Gibbons, song and dance, sex vesten Sisters, vocalists; and Mlle. Rosa, trapezist. The Gibbons are very good dancers and clog-gists, but have poor voices. The Westons were heartily received in their songs, and Miss Jennie in her sailor hornpipe. The balancing trapeze act of Mlle. Rosa was very daring and intrepid. The Zitellas still remain. Hernandez is doing a bottle balancing feat, which is fine. Lotta Forrest and Clara
